Larger Navy Role Has Top Priority

Protect Arctic Waters

OTTAWA (CP)—A defence spokesman said today Canada's naval role will be enlarged in line with Prime Minister Trudeau's policy of giving high priority to the protection of national sovereignty.

The prime minister announced early in April that the protection of sovereignty is at the top of the list of priorities in the review of the defence forces.

Defence Minister Cadieux said in the Commons Wednesday that those with a "special interest in naval affairs" should be encouraged by the prime minister's statements.

The naval role was one "which has to be enlarged."

The spokesman said Mr. Trudeau's April statement calling for protection of Canadian territories and coastlines would mean the navy would have the Arctic Ocean to guard as well as the Atlantic and Pacific.

Mr. Trudeau had placed this ahead of continental defence, NATO and United Nations peacekeeping operations.

Mr. Cadieux confirmed Wednesday that Canada will take over responsibility for the air defence of additional Canadian territory.

Replying in the Commons to Michael Forrestall (PC—Dartmouth Halifax East), the defence minister said the northern region of the North American Air Defence Command will assume responsibility for another 375,000 square miles of Canadian territory.

One of the five NORAD regions was being closed down in mid-September. At that time the northern region with headquarters at North Bay, Ont., would take on surveillance of the additional territory.

New Bus Strike Predicted

Another labor dispute will likely cut bus transportation between Vancouver Island and the Mainland later this month.

The Amalgamated Transit Union, bargaining for 150 drivers with Vancouver's Pacific Stage Lines, said today negotiations with B.C. Hydro have broken down.

STRIKE NOTICE

Both sides have agreed to extend the jurisdiction of government mediator Clark Gilmour to June 13. While the union has served strike notice on the company, it is not free to strike until 72 hours after Gilmour submits a report to the government's mediation commission.

John Harlow, president of the Vancouver local of the union, told the Times today both sides had rejected each other's final positions at meetings Wednesday.

He added that he hopes bargaining progress can be made with the mediator before Gilmour's jurisdiction runs out.

The union has been asking for a 15 per cent wage increase and what it calls minor fringe benefits. Management has offered seven per cent, the hike accepted by Vancouver city drivers for B.C. Hydro earlier this year. PSL drivers now get $3.32 houly.

Island-mainland bus service just resumed last Sunday after a 23-day strike by drivers for Victoria-based Vancouver Island Coach Lines.

HONOR PICKETS

Bus service to Vancouver from Victoria and Nanaimo is split between the two bus lines and if PSL drivers strike, they are certain to picket VICL bus-via-ferry runs.

PSL drivers honored the VICL picket lines when they appeared in Vancouver in the latter few days of the recent strike.

Joe Simpson, president of the Victoria local of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers which represents the VICL drivers, said "certainly" today when asked whether his drivers would refuse to cross PSL picket lines.

CONDEMNED OILMEN TO BE RELEASED

GENEVA (Reuters)—Biafra officially confirmed today reports that 18 European oil company employees under sentence of death will be freed.

The Biafran overseas press division office here said the governments of Gabon and the Ivory Coast had been asked to make arrangements for repatriation of the men — 14 Italians, three West Germans and one Lebanese.

The 18 men were captured last month when Biafran troops over-ran their oil rig camp in Midwest Nigeria. Ten other Italian oilmen and one Jordanian were killed in the raid.

The men al are employees of the Italian state oil corporation AGIP.

The survivors of the raid were sentenced to death by a special Biafran tribunal which found them guilty of aiding Nigeria in the civil war.

Limits Change Worrying U.S.

WASHINGTON (CP) — A state department spokesman Thursday reiterated United States concern over Canada's latest extension of territorial sea and fishing limits, charging that the move is "inconsistent with international law." (See story on Page 32.)

It was recalled that the U.S. made a formal complaint to Ottawa when the first phase of the new Canadian limits was announced in 1967.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp announced Wednesday that new areas off Nova Scotia, the west coasts of Vancouver Island and the Queen Charlottes, will be enclosed under the controversial headlands - to - headlands plan, effective June 11.

When the new limits were announced in 1967 for eastern Labrador and eastern and southern Newfoundland, the U.S. government issued a formal objection, saying the U.S. did not recognize the validity of the lines.

"We did not concur in the 1967 lines and we do not concur in these new lines," the spokesman said today.

When the state department became aware in April that Canada was planning to announce these new lines, Ottawa was referred to "the position the United States stated in 1967."

Although there are reciprocal arrangements permitting U.S. and Canadian fishing boats to operate in each other's waters, the U.S. is opposed to the principle involved. The spokesman said it could lead to grave trouble if "the principle was extended" to some other areas of the world where relations are not as friendly as between Canada and the U.S.

As for Sharp's statement that new legislation would be required before similar lines could be declared for the Gulf of St. Lawrence and other areas, the spokesman said the U.S. "would have some very strong views" on any such move.

Hanoi Accuses U.S. Of Prolonging War

PARIS (Reuters) — North Vietnam today accused President Nixon of seeking to prolong the Vietnam war and said the United States was trying to use South Vietnamese government forces as cannon fodder.

South Vietnam at the 20th Paris peace talks session said that no question related to the future of the country's 17,000,000 people could be discussed or solved without the Saigon government taking part.

U.S. chief negotiator Henry Cabot Lodge concentrated on asking detailed questions about a set of Viet Cong peace proposals made last month.

The U.S. statement also told Hanoi and the National Liberation Front they were unrealistic in demanding that the U.S. abandon its support for the Saigon government.

The session came three days before a summit meeting on Midway Island in the Pacific between Nixon and President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam.

CRITICIZES NIXON

Ha Van Lau, acting chief of the North Vietnamese delegation, read a tough six-page speech, including a virulent attack on Nixon.

He said Nixon was outdoing President Johnson in his attempts to gain time to consolidate the Saigon administration. He said the U.S. would try to use the South Vietnamese as cannon fodder, but Nixon's objective was impossible.

He called the Saigon governmen "a sick man breathing his last."

The only honorable solution was for the U.S. to end the war on the terms of the 10-point plan proposed by the Viet Cong, Lau said.

Pham Dang Lam, South Vietnamese negotiator, earlier declared that seeking to eliminate the duly elected Saigon government would only prolong the war and delay peace.

South Vietnam is determined to defend its "constitutional and legal government," he said.

RAIL ROUTE APPROVED

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons transport committee today approved a CPR application for a new rail route between the Natal coal fields and the new port of Roberts Bank, south of Vancouver.

The application was for construction of a 34-mile branch line from the Natal field north to the existing CPR line, and operating rights on about 40 miles of track owned by three companies between Mission and Roberts Bank.

Arabs Hit Israelis On War Anniversary

TEL AVIV (Reuters) — Arab guerrillas killed three Israeli soldiers in a Gaza Strip ambush today, anniversary of the start of the six-day Arab-Israeli war of 1967.

The anniversary also saw grenade and bomb explosions in Jerusalem and the Gaza Strip, an abortive student demonstration and spotty response to calls for a strike by Arabs in territory captured two years ago.

Guerrillas with a bazooka opened fire on an Israeli Army command car patrolling south of Gaza town. Three Israelis were killed and three were injured. The ambushers escaped.

One Israeli soldier and four Arab civilians were injured by a grenade in front of Herod's Gate in Jerusalem. Several persons were arrested.

In the Gaza Strip, home of 300,000 refugees and a centre of Arab guerrilla activity since it was captured by Israel two years ago, a hand grenade was thrown into a market place at Rafiah. No injuries were reported.

Russia Issues Appeal For Communist Unity

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Leonid Brezhnev, Soviet Communist party chief, appealed today to representatives of 75 other Communist parties gathered here to close their ranks in the face of a danger from imperialism.

Brezhnev, opening a long-awaited Communist summit conference in the Kremlin's ornate St. George's Hall, told the delegates that the attention of the whole world was focused on their discussions.

"The imperialists of all countries and their henchmen are afraid of our unity and of course will try to do all they can to belittle the importance of the conference, to present its proceedings and results in a distorted light," he warned.

China, North Vietnam, North Korea, Yugoslavia, Albania and the Japanese Communist party have all stayed away from the conference, which is the culmination of six years of Kremlin efforts to organize the gathering despite divisions in the Communist world.

Rogers Sees Withdrawal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State William P. Rogers indicated today there is a possibility of some early withdrawal of U.S. forces from Vietnam, but he declined to make "any predictions."

Rogers said at a news conference that training of South Vietnamese troops to replace some American units was proceeding "at a rapid pace," but said the United States was not pressing the Saigon regime on this.

Countless Uses Proposed For Benson's Big Surplus

By GERARD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP) — The scramble for Finance Minister Benson's $250,000,000 surplus began in the Commons Wednesday.

Opposition MPs, alerted to the surplus the night before in Mr. Benson's budget speech, found a billion dollars worth of uses for it.

They suggested bigger family allowances and old age pensions, subsidies for farmers, and greater tax exemptions.

But Mr. Benson's two-per-cent social development tax, levied in last fall's budget and extended in the latest one to the end of 1970, drew the most fire.

The Commons gave second reading to the October budget legislation by a vote of 101 to 75, Liberals voting alone. Then clause-by-clause study began.

In the Senate meanwhile, debate on second reading of the omnibus bill to amend the Criminal Code continued. Senator Lionel Choquette (L—Ontario) attacked the provisions on abortion, lotteries and homosexuality.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp announced to the Commons the limits which Canada intends to set on its territorial seas and fishing zones.

And Defence Minister Leo Cadieux confirmed that a squadron of Russian bombers was intercepted off Newfoundland May 14. Mr. Cadieux, apparently attaching little significance to the incident, wrote it off as a good exercise for the defence system.

Commons debate on the tax bill continues today.

John Gilbert (NDP—Toronto Broadview) said Wednesday Mr. Benson is more interested in balancing the budget than in caring for the poor. There was nothing in the budget to help the western farmer or the pensioner.

P. B. Rynard (PC—Simcoe North) said those with low incomes should have been exempted from the tax and it should have been shared with the provinces to pay medical care insurance bills.

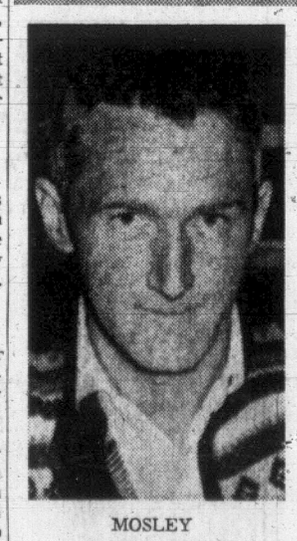

Gilbert Rondeau (Creditiste—Shefford) said the government wants people to tighten their belts at a time when stores are full and unemployment is high.

Mr. Rondeau said health schemes should be left to private enterprise and the government should concentrate on economic stability.

Nudes . . . Drugs . . . and Hippies And a Drop in Milk Production

By ED GOULD

CROFTON — A dire July 1 of nudity, drugs, hippie orgies in the woods, loud music and a resultant drop in milk production was augured at a Crofton Ratepayers meeting Wednesday night.

The dreadful forecast is the result of an application by MCM Productions and CKLG of Vancouver to stage the first annual Vancouver Island rock festival in Fuller Lake arena July 1. Ten bands would battle for the ear-drums of up to "10,000" persons.

Mrs. Jean Fyffe, president of Chemainus Ratepayers, said her group had already sent a letter of protest to North Cowichan Council to ban the bands.

"You never know. We might get 6,000 hippies at a thing like that," she said.

The application, which will also be protested by Crofton Ratepayers, will be decided at the next council meeting June 11.

Ald. Gerry Smith of North Cowichan said it would be "unfair to bring those kind of people in here when we'll be having a horse show in the ring the same day. Then they'll want to come back every year anyway."

The request had come through the recreation commission. "This has nothing to do with recreation at all," he said.

Smith said the issue should never have been raised at ratepayers' meetings but could have been quietly turned down by council. "Now it will be in headlines in the press."

He said "hippies would bring in dope and everything. How would you like your daughter to get mixed up with a bunch like that?"

Ratepayer Shirley Mah said the area had its share of dope but Smith predicted a tenfold increase. He said the Aldergrove festival had "led to nude swimming and one farmer complained his cows didn't give a drop of milk for days afterward."

Mrs. Fyffe said the applicants had offered to supply their own security and cleanup crew for the arena but that did not cover Fuller Lake Park where many would be expected to billet for the night before and after. It might even last for days, she said.

A $1,000 profit realized might be lost through damage to the park and surrounding area. She said a similar four-day rock festival at Aldergrove eventually cost the merchants there between $15,000 and $20,000 in damages "they'll never get back."

One ratepayer suggested the festival would put "Fuller Lake on the map" and bring in tourist dollars. Chairman Ken Mosley said, "Aldergrove merchants did $16,000 worth of business but that still works out to 32,000 hippies spending 50 cents each."

Stowaway Wanted Dates, Not Draft

MADRID (CP-AP) — A 22-year-old Cuban, who risked sub-zero cold, thin air and death to stowaway in the wheel well of a Havana-Madrid jet Wednesday, apparently wanted to escape Havana curfews and military service.

The Madrid morning newspaper ABC quoted Armando Socarras Ramirez as saying from his hospital bed:

"I launched myself on this so-called risky adventure because in my country youths have to be at home by midnight. It was risky, of course, but to be able to come to Spain it is necessary to risk oneself, at least in my conditions."

Socarras fell unconscious onto the ramp at Madrid's Barajas Airport after Iberia Flight 942 had parked and stopped its engines.

He had survived 7½ hours of bitter cold, estimated at about 40 degrees below zero outside the plane, and the lack of oxygen at 29,000 feet.

A fellow fugitive, Jorge Perez Blanco, may have fallen to his death from the well over the right wheel, either shortly after takeoff or over Spain just before landing.

"Really," said Socarras, "I don't know if he started the flight.

"We had to fit ourselves into the wheel wells and I chose the left wheel. Jorge helped me get in and afterwards shifted with the intention of occupying the right. I don't know anything. I can't assure you he made the climb up."

A third stowaway, unidentified by Socarras, lost his nerve and remained in Cuba, he said. The youth had told Perez and Socarras how to fit themselves into the wheel wells.

Socarras said that, besides objecting to the curfew, he did not want to serve in the armed forces.

Socarras, still a bit dull from his freezing flight, fled the atmosphere in Cuba.

"They have no liberty to the point that they can't go out with girls."

Socarras said he made the flight unconscious—probably from lack of oxygen—and the first thing he knew was shortly after he fell to the airport ramp.

Physicians said that when Socarras reached Madrid's Grand General Hospital his body temperature was 92.2 degrees fahrenheit, about five degrees below normal.

Unarmed Spyplane Shot Down

SAIGON (Reuters) — A U.S. reconnaissance jet was shot down over North Vietnam today, and one of its two crew members injured, a U. S. military spokesman reported.

He said two Phantom jets escorting the unarmed spy plane attacked the anit-aircraft gun site that hit the reconnaissance plane.

The spokesman said the F-4 plane crashed into the South China Sea about three miles east of Dong Hoi, which is 40 miles north of the demilitarized zone separating North and South Vietnam.

The two crew members of the reconnaissance plane bailed out and a helicopter picked them out of the sea. One of them was injured.

Dupont Plant Destroyed By Blast

CARNEY'S POINT, N.J. (UPI) — Searchers found a fourth body today in the shambles of a Dupont Co. chemical plant where three thunderous explosions apparently took a total of seven lives and injured 72.

Powder supt. Jim Young said the Wednesday explosions disintegrated everything around them so completely that three bodies still missing may never be found.

Charles B. McCoy, president of Dupont, assured the community that the company will pay for all damages caused by the blast, which shattered windows as far away as 10 miles. The injured included 16 children cut by glass when the windows in three Penns Grove, N.J., schools, a mile from the plant, blew in.

Of the four bodies found, only one could be positively identified. The names of the other victims were established by a roll call at the plant.

Divers Find Old Galleon

VERO BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — An ancient Spanish galleon said to be almost completely intact has been found by divers in shallow water about 300 yards offshore, it was reported Wednesday.

Carl Clausen, marine biologist at Florida State University, called it one of the most valuable underwater archeological finds in the state's history.

He said divers found what is believed to be the Capitana, a 135-foot frigate and flagship of the Galeones fleet which sank in 1715, in 15 feet of water.

$110,000 Grabbed In Quebec Robbery

QUEBEC (CP) — Four masked bandits escaped across the St. Lawrence River in a motorboat today after smashing their way into a post office in suburban Levis and grabbing three canvas sacks containing $110,000.

The four, armed with machine-guns and revolvers, exchanged about 20 shots with pursuing police during their flight but made their escape in a succession of stolen vehicles.

Police said the bandits drove two stolen cars to the Levis post office, on the south shore of the river opposite Quebec City.

They smashed their way into the post office by breaking the window of a door.

GIRLS INVADE OLD JERUSALEM

JERUSALEM (Reuters) — Arab schoolgirls today dodged Israeli police through the streets of Old Jerusalem to pay tribute to Jordanians killed in the six-day war of June, 1967.

Israeli police broke up groups of youg Arabs carrying flowers to an Arab war memorial.

The girls, dressed in school uniforms, played hide and seek with the police trying to reach the memorial. About 30 of them eventually gathered there to chant prayers for the dead.

Lorne Nystrom (NDP—Yorkton-Melville) hit Mr. Benson for a "Robin-Hood-in-reverse" policy of taxation.

When J.-A. Mongrain (L—Trois-Rivieres) rose to defend the government against charges of taxing the poor and exempting the rich, he was drowned in a sea of criticism.

Mr. Mongrain said the wealthy in Canada are subject to the highest tax rates in the Western world.

Grace MacInnis (NDP—Vancouver-Kingsway) replied that MacMillan-Bloedel had advertised a net operating profit of 38.8 per cent after taxes for 1968.

What was left after taxes was more important than the tax rate, she argued.

The two-per-cent tax was sharply criticized when unveiled last fall because it reaches a ceiling of $120 at about the $10,000 income level. This means that anyone with an income higher than that pays no more than $120.

Canadian NATO Cuts Defended

OTTAWA (UPI) — Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau said today he cannot "see the logic" in charges by U.S. and British defence ministers that Canada's NATO force reduction will increase the likelihood of nuclear war.

U.S. Defence Secretary Melvin Laird and U.K. Defence Minister Denis Healey have said that the proposed reduction of Canadian troops and phasing out of its nuclear role would mean an earlier use of nuclear weapons in the event of a conflict.

"It is difficult to see the logic of the argument," Trudeau told the House of Commons when asked by Conservative Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield for his reaction to the statements.

The prime minister said that, on the contrary, the decrease of nuclear armaments would lessen the likelihood of nuclear war.

Stable Fire Suspect Held

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police today were questioning a 16-year-old boy in connection with a stable fire that killed 21 horses at Exhibition Park race track here May 28.

Police said the boy, a ward of the Children's Aid Society, was picked up for a breach of probation.

Jack Russel, a horse trainer, collapsed and died from a heart attack as he attempted to save horses during the fire.

CHURCH DEAD IN 5 YEARS

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP) — The institutional church will be dead in five years, Dr. Richard Sutcliffe of New York told delegates to the Eastern Canada Synod of the Lutheran Church in America Wednesday.

"I'm not rooting for this or appalled by it," he told the meeting at Waterloo Lutheran University. "But anyone who can read the signs can see it coming and inside of five years."

Dr. Sutcliffe is associate director of the press, radio and television commission of the Lutheran Church and has had a weekly church broadcast for several years.

"God is telling me to get out of the protection of the institutional church and into that hellish world," he said.

"The world no longer respects clergymen. Part of it is our fault because we've made them nothing short of prostitutes. We pander them."

Dr. Sutcliffe said he was glad that his wife left the women's auxiliary of the Lutheran Church. "I've got a much better wife now."

"I want a human being for a wife, not a churchwoman and she wants a man for a husband not a brotherhood man."

The brotherhood is the Lutheran men's organization.

Strikers Picket Depot Briefly As Wage Disputes Continue

VANCOUVER (CP)—Striking oil workers Wednesday briefly set up picket lines at the transport division of Johnston Terminals in Vancouver after oil products to be shipped to Vancouver Island were moved into the company lot.

They were later withdrawn.

The products came from firms struck by the 550 members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union to back demands for a $1 hourly wage increase on rates of $3.83 to $4.07.

Earlier, a boycott of products of Imperial Oil Canada Ltd. by the B.C. Federation of Labor received approval from the federation membership.

Also Wednesday, the Employers' Council of B.C. urged business and industry in the province to resist boycott attempts against products of Imperial, Shell Canada Ltd., Standard Oil of B.C. Ltd., Gulf Canada Ltd., Home Oil Distributors and Texaco.

ECBC president F. G. Peskett said a declaration that oil products are hot was a resort to the use of the secondary boycott, forbidden by B.C. law.

In the lockout dispute between Vancouver-area supermarkets and meatcutters, new negotiations came to an unsuccessful end after a second day Wednesday and no further talks were scheduled.

The 800 meatcutters are asking a $1 hourly increase over one year and a 36-hour, four-day week. Base rates are $3.80.

In a related development, 3,000 retail clerks locked out of supermarkets since Monday continued their canvas of members in the province for financial aid.

The clerks, locked out of Safeway, Shop-Easy, Super-Valu High-Low, Lodom's and Food Fair stores as are the meatcutters, want a $1 hourly increase over two years and a shorter week if the butchers get it.

The bakery and Confectionery Workers' Union said Wednesday it is prepared to resume negotiations at any time in its dispute with major bakeries, some of them run by the supermarkets.

The 550-member union is asking a $20 weekly increase on average bench hand's rates of $144.50.

It has served strike notice on one bakery but said no strike is planned for fear of starting a lockout and getting the blame for shutting off bread supplies.

One wage settlement was approved Wednesday when 600 salmon tendermen voted to accept a new contract with a 7½ per cent increase retroactive to April 16 and a similar increase next year.

The tendermen are employed on ships carrying fish between fishboats and packing houses.

The B.C. Federation of Labor asked the provincial Board of Industrial Relations Wednesday to increase minimum wages for janitors and caretakers to $2 an hour from $1.

The federation said that $2 an hour was the minimum necessary to keep a family above the poverty line.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET, Jr.

The other morning I went outdoors before breakfast to read the temperature in the thermometer fastened to the west side of the house, out of the path of the rising sun. The time was 6 o'clock and the mercury was at 60. Inside, at breakfast, I turned on the kitchen radio for the weather news. At the airport, the announcer said, the temperature was 65.

Although the airport is better than 10 miles away, I was curious as to why there was a 5-degree difference in temperature between the two places. The terrain is the same, all flat between here and the airport, and there seems to be no reason why the temperatures should be different so early in the morning, with the sun just coming up.

The answer is that the temperature of the air is affected by many variables. We live sort of out in the country, away from large buildings. Our ground temperature, therefore, isn't affected artificially. At the airport, there is the large terminal, of course, and surrounding hangars. Also, there are the concrete runways. And they all make the temperature warmer.

Reaction to Budget Predictably Mixed

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Reaction to the federal government's budget followed a predictable pattern as business and provincial government leaders got a chance Wednesday for detailed analysis—criticism from those it hit in the pocketbook and praise from those it didn't.

The budget's effort to curb inflation through measures applied only in rich regions was praised by economists and by government leaders in unaffected areas.

Commenting on Finance Minister Benson's decision Tuesday to defer depreciation write-offs for two years in commercial construction in 22 Canadian cities in Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia, Premier Alex Campbell of Prince Edward Island said:

"This measure is a welcome move in the fight to adjust regional disparities."

JOEY PLEASED

He echoed the remarks of Premier Joseph Smallwood of Newfoundland, who hailed the "great new principle" that inflation can be dampened in some areas without affecting others.

Ontario Treasurer Charles MacNaughton said the curb would not work. It would merely encourage location of buildings just outside city limits, adding to urban sprawl.

Finance Minister Benson, however, was generally commended for achieving a budgeted surplus, usually considered an anti-inflation measure. Those in agreement included Mr. MacNaughton and Robert Winters, former Liberal trade minister.

But Quebec Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand said the $250,000,000 surplus is "inconceivable at a time when the provinces are faced with mounting financial problems."

POLICE, PROFESSOR TALK SAME LANGUAGE

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Dr. S. I. Hayakawa, a renowned semanticist and acting president of San Francisco State College, gave state senators a graphic explanation Wednesday of how words can be used to accomplish a purpose.

While testifying on a bill, the colorful administrator was asked about a recent speech on campus disorders during which he told a group of policemen, "If you have to make an arrest, keep a smile on your face as you drag the sons of bitches out."

"By using a little vulgarism," Hayakawa said, "I achieved a little rapport with those cops."

Storms Hamper Wreckage Probe

VILLA DEL CARMEN (Reuters) — Torrential rainstorms today hampered search parties struggling through rugged mountain terrain to reach the burned wreckage of a Mexican Boeing 727 airliner in which 79 persons—including national tennis hero Rafael Osuna—are feared dead in a crash near this village in northern Mexico.

Officials said there was little hope of finding any survivors. A Red Cross spokesman said the rescue parties hoped to reach the scene of the crash this afternoon.

Red Cross teams and volunteer rescue brigades used machetes to hack a path through thick undergrowth near where the Mexicana de Aviacion airline plane plunged into a hillside Wednesday.

Rescue workers were within eight miles of the scene when bad weather halted them Wednesday night.

A helicopter located the jet, its fuselage strewn across several hundred yards of forest, after it crashed near a mountain chain known as Los Tres Picos (the three peaks) about 12 miles from its destination in Monterrey, capital of Nuevo Leon state.

The helicopter pilot radioed back that it looked as though the jet exploded in mid-air, as wreckage was scattered right across the hillside with no obvious mark of impact. The pilot said there was little chance anyone survived.

Military authorities said 300 soldiers, police and voolunteers would try to climb the mountain today and hoped to reach the crash site this afternoon.

News that the 30-year-old Osuna, twice Wimbledon doubles champion, was among the passengers left Mexican sports fans stunned.

Osuna, third-ranked tennis player in Mexico, led the Mexican Davis Cup team to an unprecedented 3-2 victory over favored Australia in the North American Zone finals in Mexico City 11 days ago.

Wildcat Strikes Rejected

LONDON (AP) — The Trades Union Congress, representing 9,000,000 British workers, overwhelmingly rejected today the Labor government's plans for curbing wildcat strikes.

Then it voted by an equally wide margin to set up its own system for bringing discipline into the nation's troubled labor relations.

Meeting in emergency session, the TUC delegates accused the government of trampling on the rights of trade unionists to strike.

The bloc vote was 8,252,000 against the government's projected legislation to 359,000 for it. The vote to authorize the TUC to set up its own system of judging labor disputes was approved by 7,908,000 to 846,000.

The vote came after a long debate in which union leaders followed each other to the rostrum to condemn the government.

Prime Minister Wilson had agreed to hold off introducing the proposed bill in Parliament until after today's emergency TUC assembly—the first in 49 years and the second in the federation's 100-year history.

DELEGATES INCENSED

The delegates were particularly incensed over the section of the government's bill providing for a mandatory 28-day "cooling off" period before a wildcat strike, with legal action and fines against violators. Unionists called these "penal clauses."

Victor Feather, TUC head, warned the Wilson government that its proposed legislation would trample on the "right to belong to a union and freedom of association."

At the start of the meeting delegates passed through hundreds of banner-waving and chanting demonstrators.

DIEFENBAKER CHARGES MONARCHY BRUSH-OFF

JOHN DIEFENBAKER

OTTAWA (CP) — Former prime minister John Diefenbaker says the government is giving the monarchical system the brush-off because Prime Misister Trudeau and other ministers will not attend the investiture of Prince Charles as the Prince of Wales at Caernarvon, Wales, July 1.

However, officials said today that Charles S. A. Ritchie, high commissioner in London, is the only Canadian representutive invited to the investiture by the earl-marshal Duke of Norfolk, president of the investitute committee, on command of the Queen.

Mr. Diefenbaker said in an interview that the prince is the future King of Canada and that Mr. Trudeau and other ministers should be present at the ceremony.

Chile Calls Off American Visit

SANTIAGO (Reuters) — Smarting from two days of anti-American violence and fearing more to come, Chile Wednesday became the third Latin American country to ask Gov. Nelson Rockefeller to call off a scheduled visit.

Undaunted, the millionaire New York governor issued a statement in New York saying: "I still hope that the U.S. presidential mission will have the opportunity at a later date of obtaining, on behalf of President Nixon, the personal advice and counsel of President (Eduardo) Frei and the other leaders of his country."

In San Clemente, Calif., where Nixon stopped off on his way to Midway Island, White House spokesman Ronald Ziegler said he had no comment on Chile's decision, "but we look for Rockefeller's visits to continue.

Rockefeller's four-part fact-finding mission has been riddled with violence. Venezuela last week asked him to postpone his visit and a trip to Bolivia was abbreviated to a three-hour airport stop.

Earlier, Peru declared that a visit by Rockefeller would be inopportune, coming as it would have in the midst of a dispute between Lima and Washington over which the U.S. cut off military aid to Peru.

The request by Chile came after hundreds of students battled police outside the U.S. consulate in Santiago. They set U.S. flags on fire and were beaten back by police using tear gas.

Rockefeller was due to be in Chile on the last leg of his tour at the end of June. He begins a three-day visit to Brazil and shorter stops in Uruguay and Paraguay June 16.

Strike Threat To Labrador

SEPT-ILES, Que. (CP) — A strike tying up Quebec's iron ore industry since early May is threatening a lifeline to neighboring Labrador.

The strike by 2,600 workers over a new contract has stopped 65-per-cent of Canada's iron ore production. Another 4,000 workers have either been laid off or refused to cross picket lines.

But a grimmer aspect is the threatened shutdown of the 360-mile railway which carries food and supplies to Wabush and Labrador City, Nfld., and Schefferville, Que.

Quebec North Shore and Labrador Railway workers, supporting the strikers, threaten to stop the weekly supply train from Sept-Iles because of their dissatisfaction with negotiations.

On strike are:

—1,500 workers at Iron Ore Co. of Canada operations in Sept-Iles and Schefferville and the Wabush Mines pelletizing plant and loading stock at Pointe Noire.

—1,100 Quebec Cartier Mining Co. employees in nearby Port Cartier and Gagnon.

NOT AFFECTED

The only towns not affected by strike action are Wabush and Labrador City, which come under Newfoundland's labor code.

The three mining companies, all involved in contract talks with the United Steelworkers of America, produce about 35,000,000 tons of ore annually.

The union has asked for a $1 increase over three years in the workers' present hourly pay of $3.23. The former contract expired last October.

Union negotiator Emile Boudreau said Wednesday there is little hope of an early settlement.

The Labrador West Chamber of Commerce has sent telegrams to Prime Minister Trudeau, Premier Joseph Smallwood of Newfoundland and Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand of Quebec asking "urgent intervention" to prevent a "serious" food shortage expected to develop during the weekend.

More than 10,000 persons would be affected by the shortage.

Dominion Stores Ltd. in Wabush reported its fruits, vegetables and meats would last only until Tuesday. Bowrings Ltd. of Labrador City said it is out of vegetables. Meats would last only until the end of the week.

MOVES ON REQUEST

Businessmen in Schefferville, Wabush and Labrador City have appealed for government aid, but a union spokesman said the supply by train heads north every time it is requested.

There would be one next Wednesday, but none had gone this week because there had been no requests.

Paul Thuot, president of the mine workers union, said railway employees will be permitted to cross picket lines once every two weeks to take the supply train north with two weeks' provisions.

He said the northern communities are well-stocked with food and the situation is far from alarming.

The prime minister's office said Mr. Trudeau's giving the matter "immediate" attention.

The strikes have caused layoffs through closure of ore shipping and processing facilities on the north shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence. Iron ore is mined at Wabush by Wabush Mines Ltd. and at Labrador City by Iron Ore Co. both ship through Sept-Iles.

CARRIER HAS RIGHT-OF-WAY

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. naval officers say the burden of responsibility to avoid collision normally rests on destroyers rather than the aircraft carriers they escort.

When changing station a destroyer is supposed to avoid crossing the bow of an accompanying carrier and is required to take a wide swinging course to its new position, the officers said in interviews.

While saying they did not want to prejudge an investigation, these officers indicated they accept the Australian version of the South China Sea collision Tuesday in which the Australian carrier Melbourne sliced in halves the U.S. destroyer Frank E. Evans. The bow of the Evans sank and 74 American sailors were lost.

The Australians have sent the U.S. Navy a classified account which pictures the Evans as turning one way when she should have turned the other.

The secret report also describes the Evans as running under the bow of the Melbourne, sources said.

In a public statement, the Australian navy department has claimed the collision occurred after the Melbourne ordered the Evans, ahead of her in a screen, to change station astern of the carrier.

Unlike the Australians, the U.S. Navy is saying virtually nothing in public about the incident pending the outcome of a joint U.S.-Australian investigation arranged Wednesday.

One reason for this, sources said, is that the navy department hasn't received a report from the Evans' skipper, Cmdr. A. S. McLemore, or other officers who survived.

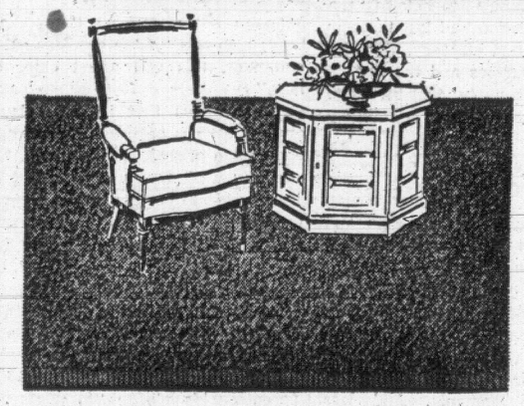

Most survivors were sleeping when the destroyer was chopped in two.

In their first official account of the disaster, none of the survivors interviewed reported any prior warning. But naval officials at Pearl Harbor emphasized it did not necessarily mean there was none.

"A large part of the crew was asleep," a Navy spokesman said, "and everything happened so fast. There may have been sirens and bells—we don't know."

Back from the Brink?

THE TOP-LEVEL MEETING OF United States and Soviet Union officials later this summer to try to reach agreement on a limitation of nuclear arms may well be one of history's most significant confrontations. If an understanding can be reached, and the first steps away from the nuclear brink can be taken — even if very small ones — then the world will have opted for sanity and posterity, and the year 1969 may some day be looked back on as a great moral watershed in the story of mankind. It could overshadow the technological watershed of 1945 which saw man cross into unknown territory giving him the capability of death on a global scale.

If, on the other hand, the meetings result in stalemate or an obvious breakdown between the two major nuclear powers, then the outlook will be grim indeed. The most likely result of a failure would be an immediate increase in the nuclear armaments of both countries—and perhaps of others—and a new tension and terror that would reach to every part of the earth. The overkill capability that now exists—a madness in itself—might be many times multiplied in a crazy international race to overpower the enemy by statistics whose practical application would mean death for all. The neutrality that has been declared for space could quickly be violated.

No doubt any progress made at the forthcoming conference will be small. The problems and complexities of the whole nuclear armaments situation are sufficient to require years to solve, even after the mutual wariness and suspicion of the conferees have been dissipated sufficiently to permit real negotiation. And back of any bilateral agreement that may be concluded lies the latent threat of a nuclear-armed China which refuses at this stage to place any limit on its rising destructive power.

Can Russia, or the United States, effect substantial reductions in nuclear weaponry while Peking continues to work toward future impregnable strength? Will Japan remain permanently non-nuclear if American nuclear armaments are significantly reduced? Clearly, any effective nuclear disarmament or limitation treaty must eventually be more than bilateral. It will have to have the support of other countries than the United States and the Soviet Union, and particularly that of China.

The road to global sanity will be a long one. But there are a number of favorable factors today which have not always been present, not the least of which is a growing realization in both Russia and the United States that the peril grows ever greater. Just one step along the road will give all humanity a new hope.

From East to Mideast

TWO YEARS AGO TODAY THE Six-Day War between Israel and the Arabs began. Israel was a quick and easy winner, but is not able to enjoy the fruits of that victory. The Middle East continues to be the world's potentially most serious troublespot, despite the current joint effort by the United States, Russia, Britain and France to impose a settlement on the area.

One of the most ominous recent developments, one that could frustrate the peace-making bid, is the emergence of China as a hard-nosed ally of the Arabs, prepared to supply more arms. Given the intense Chinese rivalry with the Soviet Union, it was inevitable they would attempt to exploit the situation. The most militant Arabs have been cooling toward their Russian ally as a result of Moscow's co-operation with the United States in seeking peace, so it was also natural that they should respond to Chinese overtures.

Syria was first, sending a high-level military mission to Peking to discuss the offer of a shipment of rockets. As far as is known, the Syrians have not yet taken up the offer. They are undoubtedly reluctant to sacrifice future Russian support for the uncertainty that goes with any relationship with Peking. Besides, China is a long way off, and does not have the ability to match the military aid that the Soviet Union can provide.

Nevertheless, the threat of Chinese intervention is still serious. There may be only a short time left to agree on peace terms and thwart Chinese plans to create new Middle East trouble. That should be incentive enough for the Big Four negotiators in New York to get moving.

Hidden Ears

PERHAPS NO MORE TELLING argument against permitting the invasion of personal privacy by government agents with wire-taps can be presented than that arising from the U.S. Government's record of telephone conversations of boxer Cassius Clay.

Astonishment at the trivial nature of the wire-tap summaries carefully hoarded for five years under a "top secret" label and now produced in court may obscure the fact that private talks between two lawful citizens were recorded by the government of the United States without their knowledge or consent and stored over a period of years for whatever use the government might wish. Accompanying that thought, of course, is the question of how many other private individuals' conversations are similarly stacked away for the benefit of posterity or the perusal of faceless bureaucrats.

This is twentieth century technology applied to fourteenth century governmental morals. Few bureaucratic practices could more debase the principle of democratic government or instil greater distrust of democratic institutions.

Fishing for Milk

IN SIMPLE LOGIC, IT MIGHT be assumed that a heavy human demand for cow's milk would automatically lead to the development of larger herds and consequently more of the nutritious fluid. But such, apparently, is not the case in Chile. There, according to Mr. C. J. Molteno, a fisheries official of the Food and Agriculture Association, 350,000 healthy new-born calves are slaughtered each year, not for food but because the milk that would sustain the small creatures is required for humans. So the offspring of the natural milk-producer may have short life expectancy.

Prospects now are bright for greater calf longevity. Science, says Mr. Molteno, has developed a milk substitute that reportedly tastes much like milk, looks like milk and contains more proteins. It is made entirely from fish.

This would be more credible news if a generation's memory of claims made for soya bean confections could be forgotten, and if the wartime deception about carrots being good for eyesight could be overlooked. There is also the small matter of "tasteless" cod liver oil. Still, the calves may not be too discriminating. And if enough calves survive, herds should increase with consequent rise in milk production.

Improvement?

I feel that the construction of a Sports Pavilion in Beacon Hill Park is an unnecessary and unfair expense.

First of all there is no reason why the taxpayer should build and maintain a pavilion which will be used by such an extremely small minority of people, that is those belonging to the Lawn Bowling, Cricket Clubs and the tennis players.

Secondly, the senior citizens, I am sure, prefer the park to be used as such, for their walks, sitting outdoors with its enjoyments.

If the sports clubs need fancy facilities, it should be up to the members to provide these for themselves on private property and with private funds. It should not be built at the expense of valuable—in the conservationist's sense, breathing space for health reasons—Beacon Hill Park property.

Instead of erecting this Sports Pavilion, the money would be better used in a way in which Beacon Hill Park would become even more attractive, beautiful and of use to all people. I suggest an outdoor Coffee House, to be built on top of the hill by the flagpole, surrounded by wide terraced rock gardens, with chairs and tables shaded by gaily coloured umbrellas amidst the flowers and trees and an outdoor dance floor in the vicinity for the young people.—Helena B. Hale M.D., 202 Vancouver St.

The Secret

Ottawa Journal

BY coincidence at the moment we were all thinking about the government's task force recommendations to put the nation behind sports, and about the grand official opening of the National Arts Centre, Earl Crowe presented in the old-fashioned Capitol theatre the Russian Festival of dance, music and song.

It was an excitingly superb festival. For two nights every seat in the place was sold out. But through the lilt of the balalaikas, in the precision of the folk-dancing, in the freshness of the costumes, the liveliness of the whole troupe and its interest in itself and each other; in the gay fun of the puppets, the nostalgia of the songs, the artistry of the ballet and the incredible skill of the acrobats—through all this one thing above all was clear:

The Russians work to attain their mastery. We've seen it in hockey, we've seen it in their arts, we've seen it in the massive accomplishment of developing their country in the last half century from a largely-peasant country to a commanding nation of the world.

Work, work, work, and more work.

Most of us in the democratic world feel, rightly, that to elevate work over principle, discipline over freedom, accomplishment over humanity, is to distort the value and meaning of life.

But we tend to forget that the ideals of freedom and humanity and leisure are not in themselves enough. If Canada's pursuit of comfort and welfare is to mean a lessening of the interest in hard work then our system is being misused.

FROM TORONTO — By HAROLD GREER

A Limitation on the Words of Judges

THREE weeks have passed since Premier Robarts promised to investigate complaints that Mr. Justice Charles Stewart of the Ontario Supreme Court was in contempt of the Legislature. Nothing more has been heard and nothing is expected; the government is apparently hoping it can simply drop what is obviously a very delicate matter. This is a pity, since Mr. Justice Stewart's views and, perhaps more important, the rather widespread editorial applause they have received, reveal a most serious misunderstanding of a fundamental principle concerning the power of the courts and their position vis-a-vis the legislative power.

Greer

While the government is taking the judgment in question to the Court of Appeal, it is quite possible it will be decided there on strictly legal grounds and without comment on what might be called the larger political issue involved. Justice Stewart's views would then go unchallenged, to be picked up and enlarged upon whenever some other jurist finds it convenient to do so.

This would be unfortunate because what Mr. Justice Stewart did, in granting an order of prohibition against an Ontario Human Rights Board of Inquiry, was to assert a judicial control over the legislative power which Canadian courts have never had and which they cannot have if the democratic process in this country is to work.

Ironically, public opinion tends to support the judiciary in such cases. The cheers come easily when, as in the present case, a judge appears to be defending a harassed citizen against crass politicians who have decided he shall do thus and so. After all, it is popularly asked, is that not what the courts are for?

Opportunities Limited

The hard answer to that question, for better or worse, must be decidedly not. It would be different if there were a constitutional Bill of Rights in Canada, as in the United States, for the courts to enforce. But given the situation as it is, the opportunities for a Canadian judge to attack any law as a violation of civil rights, or a denial of individual liberty, are really quite limited.

Indeed, it may almost be said they are non-existent. Provided that a legislature is acting constitutionally — that is, within its powers under the British North America Act — it may do with the citizenry as it pleases; and it is answerable to public opinion and the voters, not to the courts.

What the courts may do is interpret the law and review its administration (provided such a review has not been specifically precluded by the legislature) to see that justice has been or is being done. Thus they may and often do rule that decisions or actions arising from the implementation of legislation are invalid because certain basic ground rules (most commonly, that what was done was not authorized by the legislation) have not been followed.

Asked to Block Probe

In the present case, Mr. Justice Stewart was asked to prohibit a board of inquiry from investigating a complaint of alleged race discrimination on the ground that the housing accommodation in question was not a "self-contained dwelling unit" as required by law.

Since the Ontario Human Rights Code neither defines this term nor authorizes a board of inquiry to interpret it or determine it as a finding of fact, there can hardly be any question that a citizen who is accused of discrimination and who feels he is not covered by the law should be able to ask the courts so to find.

But Justice Stewart, in arriving at this finding, did not merely stop there. He went on to attack the law itself and to base his decision, in part at least, on the view that the law is a bad law. It was this approach, which he subsequently confirmed in his written reasons for judgment, that led to complaints that he was in contempt of the Legislature, and to Premier Robarts' promise that he would certainly look into the matter.

The Ontario Human Rights Code, Justice Stewart delared, consisted of "a legislative beartrap from which no subject can escape". In effect he concluded that an order of prohibition should issue because if the board of inquiry had proceeded, the landlord in question would have been denied natural justice. The Human Rights Commission, he noted, was convinced discrimination had occurred even before the Board of Inquiry was set up and he asserted there is no appeal from the findings of facts which such a board may make, nor from the recommendations it submits.

Entirely apart from the hypothetical nature of this argument, it is a most curious reading of the law; which specifically requires the board to give the parties to a complaint of discrimination "full opportunity to present evidence and to make submissions," and to recommend what ought to be done only "if it finds that the complaint is supported by the evidence." There is nothing in the Act to prevent judicial review by the courts if these conditions are not met, which is the normal recourse to justice the Canadian system provides.

As for his view that the Human Rights Commission had made up its mind even before the inquiry began, this would be significant only if the Commission and the Board were the same entity. Since they are not, Justice Stewart's complaint is analogous to saying the police believe an accused person is guilty before they charge him. It would be strange if they did not.

Such considerations, however, are really beside the point. What the parliamentarians are complaining about is that Justice Stewart, in attacking the law itself, usurped the legislative function. The Legislature, in its wisdom, has decided upon certain legislation with its constitutional powers; it is therefore not open to a judge to set the legislation aside because he does not like it.

The courts, to quote a famous axiom, are "powerless in the face of an act of parliament." If a statute is constitutionally valid, they are bound by it. A judge may say, "this is a bad law, but I must enforce it." He may not say, "this is a bad law and I will not enforce it."

Otherwise judges, who are not elected nor responsible to the public will, become the real legislators and the democratic process is vitiated.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — By C. L. SULZBERGER

Aftermath of a Presidential Stand

THREE weeks have passed since President Nixon's speech got the Vietnam negotiating impasse at least temporarily off dead centre and there has by now been sufficient time to analyze reaction and assay its importance. It would appear that foreign echoes have been good. This is true not only of most non-Communist Asian and European capitals, but also of Belgrade and (rather extraordinarily) Prague. This is a positive gain for the American position because Hanoi relies heavily on world opinion.

Sulzberger

Domestically also the speech seems to have been initially successful and to some degree succeeded in putting a coat of varnish over the badly cracked facade of national unity. Most Republican Senators and a wide spectrum of Democrats responded favorably.

Any step in the direction of harmonizing opinion in the emotionally torn United States strengthens the position of U.S. representatives at the Paris talks. How long the improvement may last is impossible to predict but, for the moment, opposition to Nixon's Vietnam policy has been temporarily reduced.

It is not sufficiently appreciated that the President took a major political decision in his speech, which apparently was largely drafted by himself instead of the customary ghosts. He might have used the opportunity to claim the Johnson Administration had lost the war by bad direction and strategy, that the Democrats were jingoes and the Republicans were a peace party; that therefore he had ordered the start of a military withdrawal.

Cheap and Easy

This would have been a cheap and easy thing to do because the loudest noises today come from various American elements in favor of "bugging out." Many people suffer from the delusion that as soon as peace comes the financial saving will be so great that billions will be available for urban and other social developments. And less vocal elements endorsing a firm policy would find themselves isolated with no other leader to champion their cause if Nixon became dovish.

Instead, however, the President courageously chose to travel a lonely course seeking to create the basis for a settlement that would neither in appearance nor in reality constitute a cave-in. Insufficient attention has been paid so far to those sections of his speech which insisted that Hanoi must ultimately withdraw its troops not only from South Vietnam but also from Cambodia and Laos; also that "if the needless suffering continues, this will affect other decisions."

This imples that if Hanoi launches another serious offensive there would be some form of serious retribution. No one can say what that would be but Nixon has tried to convey the impression during his first five months as President that he will always promise less than he can actually deliver. In this light, a mild warning means a lot.

Instead of lending himself to a facile solution, blaming the Democrats for a Republican evacuation, Nixon put his head deliberately on history's block by repeating his pledge "to win true and lasting peace" and advising "the American people to hold me accountable."

Theme Maintained

Any study of his pre-inaugural writings and statements show that Nixon has consistently related Vietnam to the global position of the United States and there is nothing in his May 14 speech that contradicts this theme, even though the tone was conciliatory.

The objectives set forth are modest. They offer Hanoi a reasonable settlement in which its supporters would have an excellent opportunity to express themselves and plan an increasing role in the South. Beyond that, however, it became officially apparent the President does not intend to lend his immense authority to any kind of disguised collapse.

The Vietnam speech served as a guideline to Administration policy: peace, yes; sell-out, no. And this is clearly related to the broader foreign policy of the United States now in the process of elaboration. Neither Vietnam doves nor Vietnam hawks seem to have fully understood what the President was saying.

United States policy apparently remains resolved to meet the challenge in Southeast Asia and stay with its commitment to seek a valid settlement. The goals are limited but the approach is firm. After all, the name of the game is diplomacy, not ornithology.

DENNIS THE MENACE

Looking Back

From the Times, June 5, 1909.

The stately home, Craigdarroch, of the late Mrs. Joan Dunsmuir has been sold. The purchaser is Griffith R. Hughes, chartered accountant of this city. It is his intention to proceed with the subdivision as planned some weeks ago, and offer at least a part of it for sale. The price paid is said to have been about $325,000, which is a little above the actual cost of the building. The property will be subdivided into 144 lots.

SKYLINE of Rhodesian capital of Salisbury reflects wealth that continues to expand despite pressures of outside world.

Prosperity Coming to South Africa

By JEROME CAMINADA
The Times, London

For 30 or 40 years the world has been shaking its fist at South Africa, and for three or four years it has been attempting to punish Rhodesia.

Nothing has come of it. Countless times the whites have been condemned beyond recall, and still their system has moved forward.

What is missing in the world's reprobation, that it should so fail in its purpose? Perhaps one single thing—all the advice, all the censure offers no reassurance to the whites on their own future.

Self-interest and survival move people first, whether collectively in the form of governments, or individually as citizens.

Transpose one good Londoner from his native streets to live in Salisbury, and at once his outlook changes from moral rectitude to what he thinks is practical sense in the conditions around him.

In looking at Southern Africa now, South Africa and Rhodesia should be taken together. The two are not joined, and it would take a deal of match-making yet before they could be pronounced formally and constitutionally one. But they are walking out together, from sheer loneliness if nothing else.

Zambia the Key

Without South Africa, Rhodesia would have gone down under sanctions in six or nine months—all white Rhodesians I asked about this in Salisbury said so. South Africa in turn leans on Rhodesia, as she tried to build up a front with, and not against, the African north.

Zambia is the key country. South Africa would greatly like to have full relations with Zambia as she has with Malawi, Swaziland, Botswana and Lesotho.

Outwardly Zambia is hostile, but in the last resort she has to live with the South, and not with such fanciful railway-building sponsors as the Chinese, who come from the other side of Asia.

Rhodesia is becoming more and more interlaced with the republic of South Africa. Some South Africans are not enthusiastic about this, but the two cannot be disentangled now.

This whole area, and not only Zambia which is a part of it, has to live with the South. The East and Central African nations who met in Lusaka last month made an unmistakeable moderate appeal to the white South to co-operate in negotiations, so as to spare themselves the dilemma of sponsoring vague armed resistance as best they could.

Easing Some Bonds

Because of South Africa's relative strength, a slight ideological loosening is taking place in that country.

The most visible symptom is an inching towards interracial sport. South Africans do not enjoy being eased out of world sport.

Apart from sport, the apartheid log jam is being loosened, as it always has been, by economic forces. Labor migrating from the Bantustans to the towns is the main such influence, and though the government tries to head this off it is increasing because white manpower is short.

Now the government is trying to foster industry in the black areas by inviting a straight-jacket form of white investment there.

This is called "agency" investment. White investors will be "agents" for the official Bantu and Xhosa Trust and Development Corporations and must pay these rent or commission.

They cannot, however, acquire rights of land ownership, and they must avoid lines with foreign interest.

Fifteen years ago the north coast of Natal was beach, bush and sugar cane. Now an aluminum smelter is being installed at Richards Bay, pipelines have already been laid to link a new port and railhead there with Durban, and to carry crude oil to disused coal mines in the Transvaal for storing.

And in time there will be wharves for the biggest tankers. St. Lucia, a nature reserve higher up the coast, is to be a missile base.

This area was once part of Zululand, but Richards Bay is now "white" and probably neither it nor St. Lucia will be inside the Zulu "homeland" when its borders are finally drawn.

Unless the borders are close at hand, the new industry may siphon off labor from the Bantustan permanently.

Away from the non-white areas the prosperity for both black and white—though in relative terms, of course—is visible everywhere. Shoes and clothing in Johannesburg shops which sell to Africans can cost as much as in London, and they are bought too.

The freeways which now encircle and lie across the larger cities are used by African, Indian and colored drivers, as well as European. This was not so in the past and—most novel sight of all for South Africa—the African driver today is sometimes a woman.

The prizes of such urban sophistication are bound to tempt the graduates of the five non-white universities—three African, one Indian and one colored—which, amid the clamor over student apartheid, are at work in different parts of the country.

These are meant to serve their own communities, but how this can be done is one of the quandaries that has led to the separation of two groups in the ruling nationalist party—the Verligtes (enlightened) and the Verkramptes (closed inwards).

The Verkramptes believe that a dilution of principles in apartheid is unnecessary, and would bring the whole apparatus of power to the ground. The Verligtes have not turned their backs on apartheid either.

But there is a questioning among them on where some realities lie, and uncertainty particularly on whether the coloreds can be fitted into this or that slot.

Debate Went to Heart Of 'Canadian Question'

By DOUGLAS FISHER and HARRY S. CROWE

Robert Stanfield has never looked more like a prime minister than he did during debate on the Official Languages Bill. And John Diefenbaker has never looked less like one.

Fisher

Of course, there were grounds for hesitation about some of the details of the Bill, such as uncertainty about the outer limits of the authority of the language commissioner. These were matters which could have been pursued with profit—and with good will—in committee.

But the issue before the House of Commons was one of principle, and one which goes right to the heart of "the Canadian question." The significance of the Bill was best put by a Conservative MP coming from the Prairie reaches where all but one of the Diefenbaker-led dissenting votes were located.

Crowe

Gerald Baldwin of Peace River, one of Parliament's most respected members, put it this way:

"If we in Canada cannot learn to live together in friendship, peace and understanding, what hope is there for the rest of the world? For this reason, despite the misgivings which some honorable members have, I would urge them to have regard to the overall advantages and to the greater benefits which will arise from the continued unity of this country, and swallow their reluctance, as I did mine, and express their approval and vote for this measure."

We prefer to believe that in this, as on previous occasions, Mr. Baldwin was expressing the true spirit of Canadian Conservatism. It is the spirit which Mr. Stanfield has unwaveringly expressed as his own.

We are certain that it is much more faithful to the outlook and the feelings of the great mass of Canadians than the "intellectual" approach of Mr. Trudeau.

The Prime Minister wrote in his book of essays, Federalism and the French Canadians, "I am suggesting that cold, unemotional rationality can still save the ship."

That may be true enough for those cold, unemotional pragmatic Frenchmen, but the events of last week have shown that it isn't good enough for the rest of us hot, excitable Englishmen. A Canada of two languages and two cultures is something to get excited about.

●

What Mr. Trudeau supplied during the 1968 election, and what he is no longer supplying, is some excitement. It is true that there was a considerable amount of deception at the core of the excitement, and the Tory split on the Official Languages Bill, and much of the Prairie opposition to the Bill and uncertainty about it can be traced to that deception.

Mr. Trudeau spoke of "One Canada" and "One Nation" across Western Canada, using all the old cliches which John Diefenbaker had employed at the Conservative convention in his attempt to undo the mild Montmorency declaration in support of "deux nations."

The prime minister excited all the old feelings against Quebec, against Henry Bourassa's idea of a "duality" of English-speaking and French-speaking Canadians.

●

This was all that Montmorency ever meant to Robert Stanfield. But his unfortunate link with the well-meaning but fuzzy Marcel Faribault lent credence to the wilder spectres which Trudeau supporters were able to conjure up. Montmorency came to mean semi-separatism and imposed bilingualism at the same time.

But Good Old One Canada would save us. Quebec and French Canadians would be checkmated; there would be great Ottawa initiatives; and the Centennial and Expo enthusiasm would live on.

That was the promise. But the performance, to Western eyes, has been an inactive Ottawa, a prime minister obsessed with topics which bore them, and moreover, one who seems to be going back on what he appeared to be promising, but was not, on the central English-French issue.

If Liberals or New Democrats had been elected in large numbers from the Western provinces, or if the Trudeau government was establishing a record of important achievement, it all wouldn't matter too much.

But Conservatives were elected, and they feel they have been double-deuced first by Dalton Camp and Robert Stanfield at Montmorency and the Toronto convention, and then by Pierre Trudeau on the hustings.

●

Mr. Diefenbaker is probably leading a declining remnant in pursuit of an illusion and in an attempt to justify positions overrun in the past. But one cannot be certain.

Officials Languages Bills don't sell wheat. Dogmatic (and questionable) lecturettes on fine points of federalism don't find jobs for a rapidly increasing pool of better-educated young people.

Expanding the authority of the executive at the expense of Parliament while discarding claims over jurisdiction to provincial empire-builders does nothing to focus national attention upon the plight of Indians and Metis.

Can we be a nation without national plans and national policies?

Can Bourassa's "duality" be realized except as a part of an attractive package of bread-and-butter policies of a federal government which is a going concern?

Radical Reformers Left Behind

By NORMAN COUSINS
Editor, Saturday Review

A little more than a year ago, the editors met with a group of black militant leaders. Whatever their other differences, the militants had no difficulty in agreeing on two points.

The first point, expressed by James Baldwin, was that it was hazardous in the extreme for the white community to regard mounting Negro protest as nothing more than a reflection of social unrest. What the American people were witnessing, he said, was the advance tremors of revolutionary upheaval.

The second point, made by Floyd McKissick, was that many black militant leaders, including those in the room, would be denounced as temporizers or Uncle Toms within a year because of the movement's swift gravitation to revolutionary extremes.

●

This discussion comes to mind with each new headline telling of black students making demands at gunpoint, or of attacks on white merchants or of disruption of church services.

Equally significant are news items reporting the shocked reaction of Negro spokesmen like Bayard Rustin to the Cornell University episode—and the prompt denunciation of Rustin as a "white lackey" by black extremists who are also now excoriating Martin Luther King, Jr., and his widow for "deluding" blacks into believing there could be any basic upgrading in their condition without rivers of blood.

Even Eldridge Cleavtr's Soul on Ice is regarded as tepid by some members of the new black wave.

It is the old story of radical reformers being left behind or repudiated by the forces they helped to bring into motion.

One of history's most persistent and elusive questions is whether there may have been an open moment in the initial phases of the French and Russian revolutions when essential change could have been effected in time to avert torrential violence.

The biggest problem lies not in change itself but in the absence of enough awareness that change is necessary.

King Charles I might have been able to keep his head if he had not closed it against facts that were bulging and bristling all around him.

Two decades ago the Chinese landowners lost everything because they thought they could keep everything—even when they were within earshot of the revolution bearing down upon them.

The French government knew less about what was really happening in Algeria in 1954 than almost any bootblack in Tunis.

Americans possess great natural advantages over other peoples in history who have been confronted by revolutionary challenges. American history works for change, not against it.

The United States was conceived as an instrument of change.

●

It is doubtful whether ever before or since the Philadelphia Constitutional Convention there has been a group of men who were more mindful of the possibilities for progress or who better understood the first law for the perpetuation of a nation: that government changes least that changes most.

Out of their comprehension of the endless need to upgrade the human situation and to provide flexible institutions in order to do it, the American founding fathers created a government that was to last longer than any of its contemporaries.

But that government is now in jeopardy — not because it is unable to cope with revolutionary situations but because its people do not understand they have everything they require to deal with those situations.

If the materials of revolution and national tragedy are piling high in America today, it is only because people are even more blind to the magnificent tools for social progress at their disposal than they are to the price they will have to pay for the failure to use them.

Let us take part of the three or four hundred billions of dollars that a fully developed ABM would cost; let us also take part of the six or seven hundred billion dollars that would be required to put our cities underground — this being the probable next sep after the ABM; let us take some of this money now and put it into the remaking of American society.

The means are available. So is the knowledge. All that is missing is the moral imagination.

Flatworms Regeneration 'Champs'

By DR. CLIFFORD CARL
Director, Provincial Museum

After the sponges and the jellyfishes and their kin the next group of animals in order of their complexity is the flatworms. This phylum, technically called Platyhelminthes, actually is composed of three closely related groups, the free-living flatworms, the liver flukes, and the tapeworms; all of these together with a number of other creatures with a similar body shape were originally placed in a group called Vermes or simply "worms" until more discriminating workers separated them into proper groupings that are recognized today.

Carl

★ ★ ★

The simplest of these are the flatworms or planarians. The great difference between the members of this group and those lower on the scale is that they possess a definite head and tail end.

They are therefore bilaterally symmetrical with a right and left side, resulting in a more conventional body plan than that of the jellyfish group inasmuch as most members of the animal kingdom are designed in this way.

While the flatworms are obviously very different from the jellyfishes and their relatives they have one feature in common, a single opening into the body. The opening serves for the passage of food into the body and for the ejection of undigestible material.

★ ★ ★

One small group of flatworms has an additional characteristic shared with green sea anemones—the presence of microscopic algal plants within the body tissues. The plants apparently manufacture food for their host enabling the worm to exist by simply exposing its body to sunlight instead of searching out food in the normal manner.

Most flatworms are roughly leaf-shaped with the head at the broad end. Some are more elongate like the blade of a spear with a triangular base. Usually there are two rather prominent eye-spots near the front end but the mouth is located on the flat ventral surface near the middle of the body and opens through a tubular proboscis that can be extended in all directions.

Usually, too, the body is so thin and translucent that the "innerds" can be easily seen except in large species where pigment cells cause the skin to be opaque.

In size flatworms range from about a quarter inch long to over six inches; most of our local species are under two inches in length.

Representatives are found in the sea, in fresh water and on land, and size, shape and color differ according to the environment. One of our most conspicuous species is leaf-like in form and about two inches long. It lurks among rocks and in beds of mussels upon which it probably preys.

★ ★ ★

Many more kinds are found along the shore, on mud flats, in tide pools and associated with various other marine animals but their life histories are unknown and indeed most of them lack names for want of study.

Better known are the various fresh-water species. These have been the subject for research for a long time and consequently are well documented. Perhaps the most interesting feature about them is their great power of regeneration.

When injured or deliberately cut into pieces, missing parts can be replaced and each small piece can grow into a whole new individual.

While a number of other creatures are able to replace lost limbs or to grow new bodies from parts fresh-water flatworms are the champions.

★ ★ ★

They also have great powers of withstanding starvation. When no food is available a flatworm becomes progressively smaller in size.

As starvation progresses internal organs are absorbed, first the eggs, then reproductive glands, part of the intestine and finally muscles of the body wall. If feeding is resumed the organs are regenerated in the reverse order and the animals soon return to normal size.

Since flatworms are of no great economic importance they have received scant attention except by a relatively few biologists. A more intensive study of this group of remarkable creatures could be very rewarding.

DataTech Systems

Saanich-based DataTech Systems Ltd. has bought a Vancouver computer service company, Nick Abramsen and Associates, as part of an expansion program started last year.

President Earl W. Large estimates the acquisition will raise DataTech revenue by $100,000 a year.

The firm previously was Vancouver Machine Accounting and been in business about 10 years.

Brazilian Light

Shareholders of Brazilian Light and Power Co. Ltd. Wednesday approved a change of name of their company to Brascan Ltd., which they hope will enable it to invest more heavily in Canadian enterprises without being taxed.

The change of name will take effect June 23. Shareholders approved it almost unanimously.

President Robert Winters said the company will transfer the income from its utilities operations in Brazil to a new subsidiary, Brazilian Light Ltd., which is free of Canadian income tax. Brazilian Light will be able to transfer income, tax-free to the parent company.

B.C. Tel

An unaudited statement lists the net profit of B.C. Telephone for the three months ended March 31 at $3.77 million, up 16 per cent from $3.25 million for the same period last year.

Common share earnings were $1.04 compared with 90 cents.

Operating revenues were $36.7 million, against $32 million.

Operating expenses were $25.9 million compared with $22.6 million.

VSE Warning

John Van Luven, president of the Vancouver Stock Exchange Tuesday warned the public to take it easy in the wake of a new annual record on the local market.

Van Luven told the public to investigate the difference between a speculation and an investment and said "this is, to a great extent, an inflationary market."

Although the year is less than half completed, the record for value of shares traded in any one year was broken Monday.

And, he said, the volume of shares traded should eclipse last year's total by July 15 at the latest.

Sileurian Chief

Five holes drilled by Sileurian Chieftain adjoining its main Alice Arm molybdenum ore body have proved to show values of less than .1 per cent molybdenum sulfide.

But three more are showing better values, said Sileurian president Walter Eilers.

The diamond drilling program started at the beginning of May and will run another two or three months, with crews working 16 hours a day.

The Canadian Mutual Funds Association has established its own self-regulated audit and financial reporting system to help protect the equity fund investor.

T. A. M. Hutchison, senior partner of Peat, Marwick, Mitchell and Co. of Toronto, was appointed industry auditor and independent audit firms have been engaged by association member companies.

The audit committee urged all association members to cooperate with the industry auditor and the committee "so that our association can clearly demonstrate to the regulatory authorities that it deserves recognition as a self-regulating body."

Can. Standards

T. A. Lindsay, president of Phillips Cables Ltd., Brockville, Ont., was named president today of the Canadian Standards Association, the organization that devises minimum codes of safety and performance for engineering and manufactured products.

Lindsay took over from John Jenkins of Ottawa at CA's 50th anniversary meeting.

The association, which groups manufacturers, consumers and representatives of governments, public utilities and universities, also announced an administrative reorganization consolidating activities into two main divisions, one for establishing standards and the other to certify products.

BOUND for trials in British Columbia waters as part of a Canadian tour, the new 10-seat Cushioncraft CC-7, owned by the British ministry of technology, is shown being unloaded from shipboard at Montreal last month. Craft is an air cushion vehicle, as name implies, but represents a different approach than the previously tested Hovercraft line.

Funds Seeking Power Of Self-Regulation

By BORIS MISKEW

MONTREAL (CP) — A two-year study of the mutual funds industry has recommended that the Canadian Mutual Funds Association be given "formal recognition by the various provincial securities commissions as a self-governing body."

The study, commissioned by the association, was made public Wednesday at the association's seventh annual meeting. The voluminous report was prepared by Profs. W. R. Waters and G. D. Quirin of the University of Toronto School of Business.

The 17 papers making up the report covered such aspects of the financial industry as the competitiveness of the Canadian mutual funds operation and the benefits provided by mutual funds.

The study recommended that the association be assigned the responsibility of maintaining and administering professional education programs for the mutual funds industry.

WANTS TO SUPERVIE

The association should be given the responsibility for supervising the activities of its members, subject to the general supervision of a government agency or agencies.

Other recommendations suggested:

● That there should be no restrictions on the extent to which funds invested in foreign securities, except those stated in the funds' bylaw.

● That fund share prices become effective at precisely the time they are announced.

J. B. Sparling, president of the association, told the session prior to the release of the report that the association should be made the official licensing authority for those engaged in the sale of mutual funds.

The success of mutual funds has resulted in many "imitations," he said, making it necessary to license all persons and companies involved in the sale of such equity savings.

Sparling said some "corporate part-timers" go out of their way to discredit legitimate mutual fund sales charges—"yet such charges are the only way a professionally trained sales organization can be compensated."

About 750,000 Canadians now hold $3 billion in equity savings, he said.

Northwood Strikes Back At Fisheries Minister

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Officials of Northwood pulp mill have rejected statements by Fisheries Minister Jack Davis who said their operation is the worst offender in the province.

The company said there were some problems in the first few months of operation but since then "results have been consistently very good."

Davis said earlier that wood fibre wastes from the mills have been found as far south in the Fraser River as Mission in the Fraser Valley and the effluent from the mill has killed salmon ever since it started up in 1966.

In a subsequent interview, the minister said Northwood has until fall to meet pollution test standards or it may be closed.

He said the mill could easily control the pollution with its current equipment and blamed the problem on poor management.

The Northwood statement said results from a British Columbia Research Council study during the past year showed fish survival has reached 100 per cent for long periods of time.

"The minister must be aware of plans made quite some time ago by Northwood to again add substantially to the equipment needed to achieve absolutely positive results," the mill said.

Canbrew Trade Heavy: Offer Still in Doubt

Heavy trading in Canadian Breweries Ltd. shares Wednesday was resumed in early trading today as the investment community remained in doubt about a $163 million takeover bid.

Investment men still are unaware of the relative success or failure of a Philip Morris Corp. offer to buy 10.88 million shares of the Toronto-based company at $15 a share, which would give the New York firm 50 per cent of outstanding shares.

Speculation persists that a third party is trying to win control of Canbrew by purchasing shares at market prices, or that a third party is acting on behalf of Philip Morris in the stock market in order to cinch its bid for control.

The offer could go either way at this point.

Trading on Toronto Stock Exchange in the forenoon today was more than 300,000 shares, but since May 23 it is estimated some 8 million Canbrew shares have traded.

More than 3 million changed hands at Toronto alone, and Montreal has come close to Toronto trading some days. New York trading also has been heavy.

Pressure Wednesday took Canbrew to a $14 high and this morning trading was still in the $13¾-$14 range.

Maritime States Reach Agreement

LONDON (AP) — The world's major shipping countries have agreed to work out a single method of calculating ship tonnages.

The agreement is intended to eliminate disputes over such things as harbor and canal dues which are calculated on tonnage. The new method will supplant six differing tonnage systems now in use.

Tonnage in shipping terms is an expression not of weight but of volume, As used now, gross tonnage is roughly equivalent to the total volume of a ship. Net tonnage is gross tonnage minus the space taken up by engines, crew quarters and similar spaces not available for cargo or passengers.

Under the new system gross tonnage will remain an expression of total volume. Net tonnage, the measure favored for assessing dues and taxes, will be calculated on the ship's displacement.

The new guides were adopted in a plenary session of a tonnage measurement conference sponsored by the United Nations Inter-Governmental Maritime Organization which opened a week ago.

The conference still has to work out technical details and present a draft convention for signature on June 23.

Insurance Loans Beat High Interest

By LEROY POPE
UPI Business Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — High interest rates charged by banks and other lenders are driving many firms and individuals into borrowing on life insurance.

Loans on policies have spurted $500 million so far this year to $12 billion. Thta's around 12½ per cent of policy reserves, up from 9 per cent five years ago. However, the 12½ per cent of policy reserves is only 6 per cent of assets. The big spurt has come since 1966 when general interest rates started climbing.

Money borrowed on life insurance isn't going into the stock market to any great extent. Nor does it mean rich citizens are carrying big policies at the expense of the federal tax collectors. Uncle Sam put a stop to that a decade ago by changing the rules.

The money is going into business operations, down payments on homes, cars and the like.

The reason: Insurance companies generally are obligated to lend the legal loan value of a policy to the holder at specified rate ceilings— 5 per cent in New York for example. Currently, the best bank discount rate for personal loans is 6 per cent and if you are already fairly heavily in debt you might have to pay 7 per cent or more. Business loans, except for prime loans, can cost 9 to 14 per cent.

That many of the new policy loans are made to finance business operations and save interest was confirmed by a spokesman for New York Life Insurance Co., a firm noted for its volume of business life insurance, large whole life policies tailored to suit the particular situation of a business. "Loans against this type of policy have risen sharply," the New York Life official said.

New York Life's big rival, the Metropolitan, said much the same thing.

●

Some business policy loans have been large. Grey advertising, Inc., recently borrowed $500,000 at a cheap 5 per cent because it had the foresight to insure its top executives heavily.

According to the companies and the Institute of Life Insurance, the rise in policy loans is viewed with mixed feelings in the insurance world.

"On the one hand we are glad to be of service to our policyholders in this hour of tight money," explained an official of Metropolitan Life. "The loan value at reasonable interest in an emergency is one inducement we use to sell insurance."

On the other hand, every dollar policyholders borrow at 5 per cent is a dollar the insurance companies cannot invest at 6 per cent or more.

●

Both the Institute of Life Insurance and company spokesmen insisted they were less concerned about that than about the tendency of policyholders to let a policy lapse after they have borrowed on it to the hilt rather than repay the loan.

"We also are concerned because too many policyholders borrow heavily on their life insurance without telling their wives," said one official. "Then when the man dies, the widow is shocked to discover the loan has seriously diminished the value of the policy."

HOUSING CO-OP FACING ACTION

VANCOUVER (CP) — Foreclosure action is planned against the first co-operative housing project attempted in the province.

C. J. Hook, general manager of the British Columbia Central Credit Union, said Monday the CCU will take the action against Barclay Co-op Housing Association.

Barclay Co-op is currently building a 24 apartment, $400,000 development in Port Alberni.

The CCU has more than $80,000 in claims against Barclay Co-op, Mr. Hook said, adding that there were other claims amounting to at least $100,000.

Saying the action was taken with great reluctance, he attributed the failure of the project to lack of know-how. He said the people involved were "extremely sincere and idealistic" but "they just didn't have competence."

According to the general manager, costs of the apartment could be 30 per cent higher than estimates, following a number of set-backs.

Barclay Co-op Housing is one of five autonomous groups within the Western Co-operative Housing Society, a non-profit organization.

Languages Supporter Critical

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative MP Melvin McQuaid, a Prince Edward Island lawyer, says he likes the federal government's official languages bill in principle. But nearly all its important details bother him.

In two days of committee study this week he has contended that the bill, as it stands, gives too much power to an official languages commissioner, is unjust to persons about whom complaints are made, and could commit the government to maintaining bilingual services in areas where this might become impractical or uneconomic.

He also maintained, in an attack Wednesday on "gross injustices" in the bill, that it could leave an offender liable to two years in prison.

Because the bill contains no provision for penalties, language offences would come under clause 107 of the Criminal Code, he said.

This clause says a person can spend two years in prison for offences against any federal statute that does not spell out its own penalties.

WANTS CHANGES

The 57-year-old Mr. McQuaid, MP for Cardigan and a former P.E.I. attorney-general, joined 40 other Conservatives in voting for the languages bill when it got second reading in the Commons last week by 197 votes to 17. But he said in committee Wednesday he intends to propose a number of amendments before the bill goes back to the Commons for third and final reading.

The languages bill would make it the duty of federal departments, agencies and Crown corporations to provide services in both French and English in all areas of Canada that are designated bilingual districts.

Mr. McQuaid applied his harshest criticism Wednesday to the bill's clause 32, which states that when anybody has made a complaint to the languages commissioner, the commissioner is obligated to tell him what has been done about it.

What concerned the Prince Edward Island MP is that the clause says nothing about the person against whom the complaint has been made.

Donald S. Thorson, associate deputy minister of justice, noted that the commissioner would have to inform the civil servant before making any report that might affect him adversely.

HAS RIGHT

Mr. McQuaid said this is not enough. Any person against whom there was a complaint had to be guaranteed the right to be informed and to be heard.

Mr. Thorson, one of the drafters of the bill and the man who has been most often called upon to explain its provisions in committee, is a son of one of its most vigorous critics, Judge J. T. Thorson, retired president of the Exchequer Court of Canada. Judge Thorson contends the bill is unconstitutional.

Most of the discussion at Wednesday's committee meeting dealt with the powers of the language commissioner. Deputy justice minister D. S. Maxwell said this official would be "a type of policeman" carrying out investigations and gathering evidence, rather than a court sitting in judgment.

Mr. Maxwell said any inquiries the languages commissioner carried out would be "purely investigative, fact-finding" proceedings, culminating in a report to the cabinet or to Parliament if his finds were serious enough. This was why the provisions of the Canada Evidence Act would not apply to them.

Restrictions Holding Back Arctic Area

MONTREAL (CP) — Military security measures have restricted information about Canada's north which is desperately needed now for development, an Arctic expert said Wednesday.

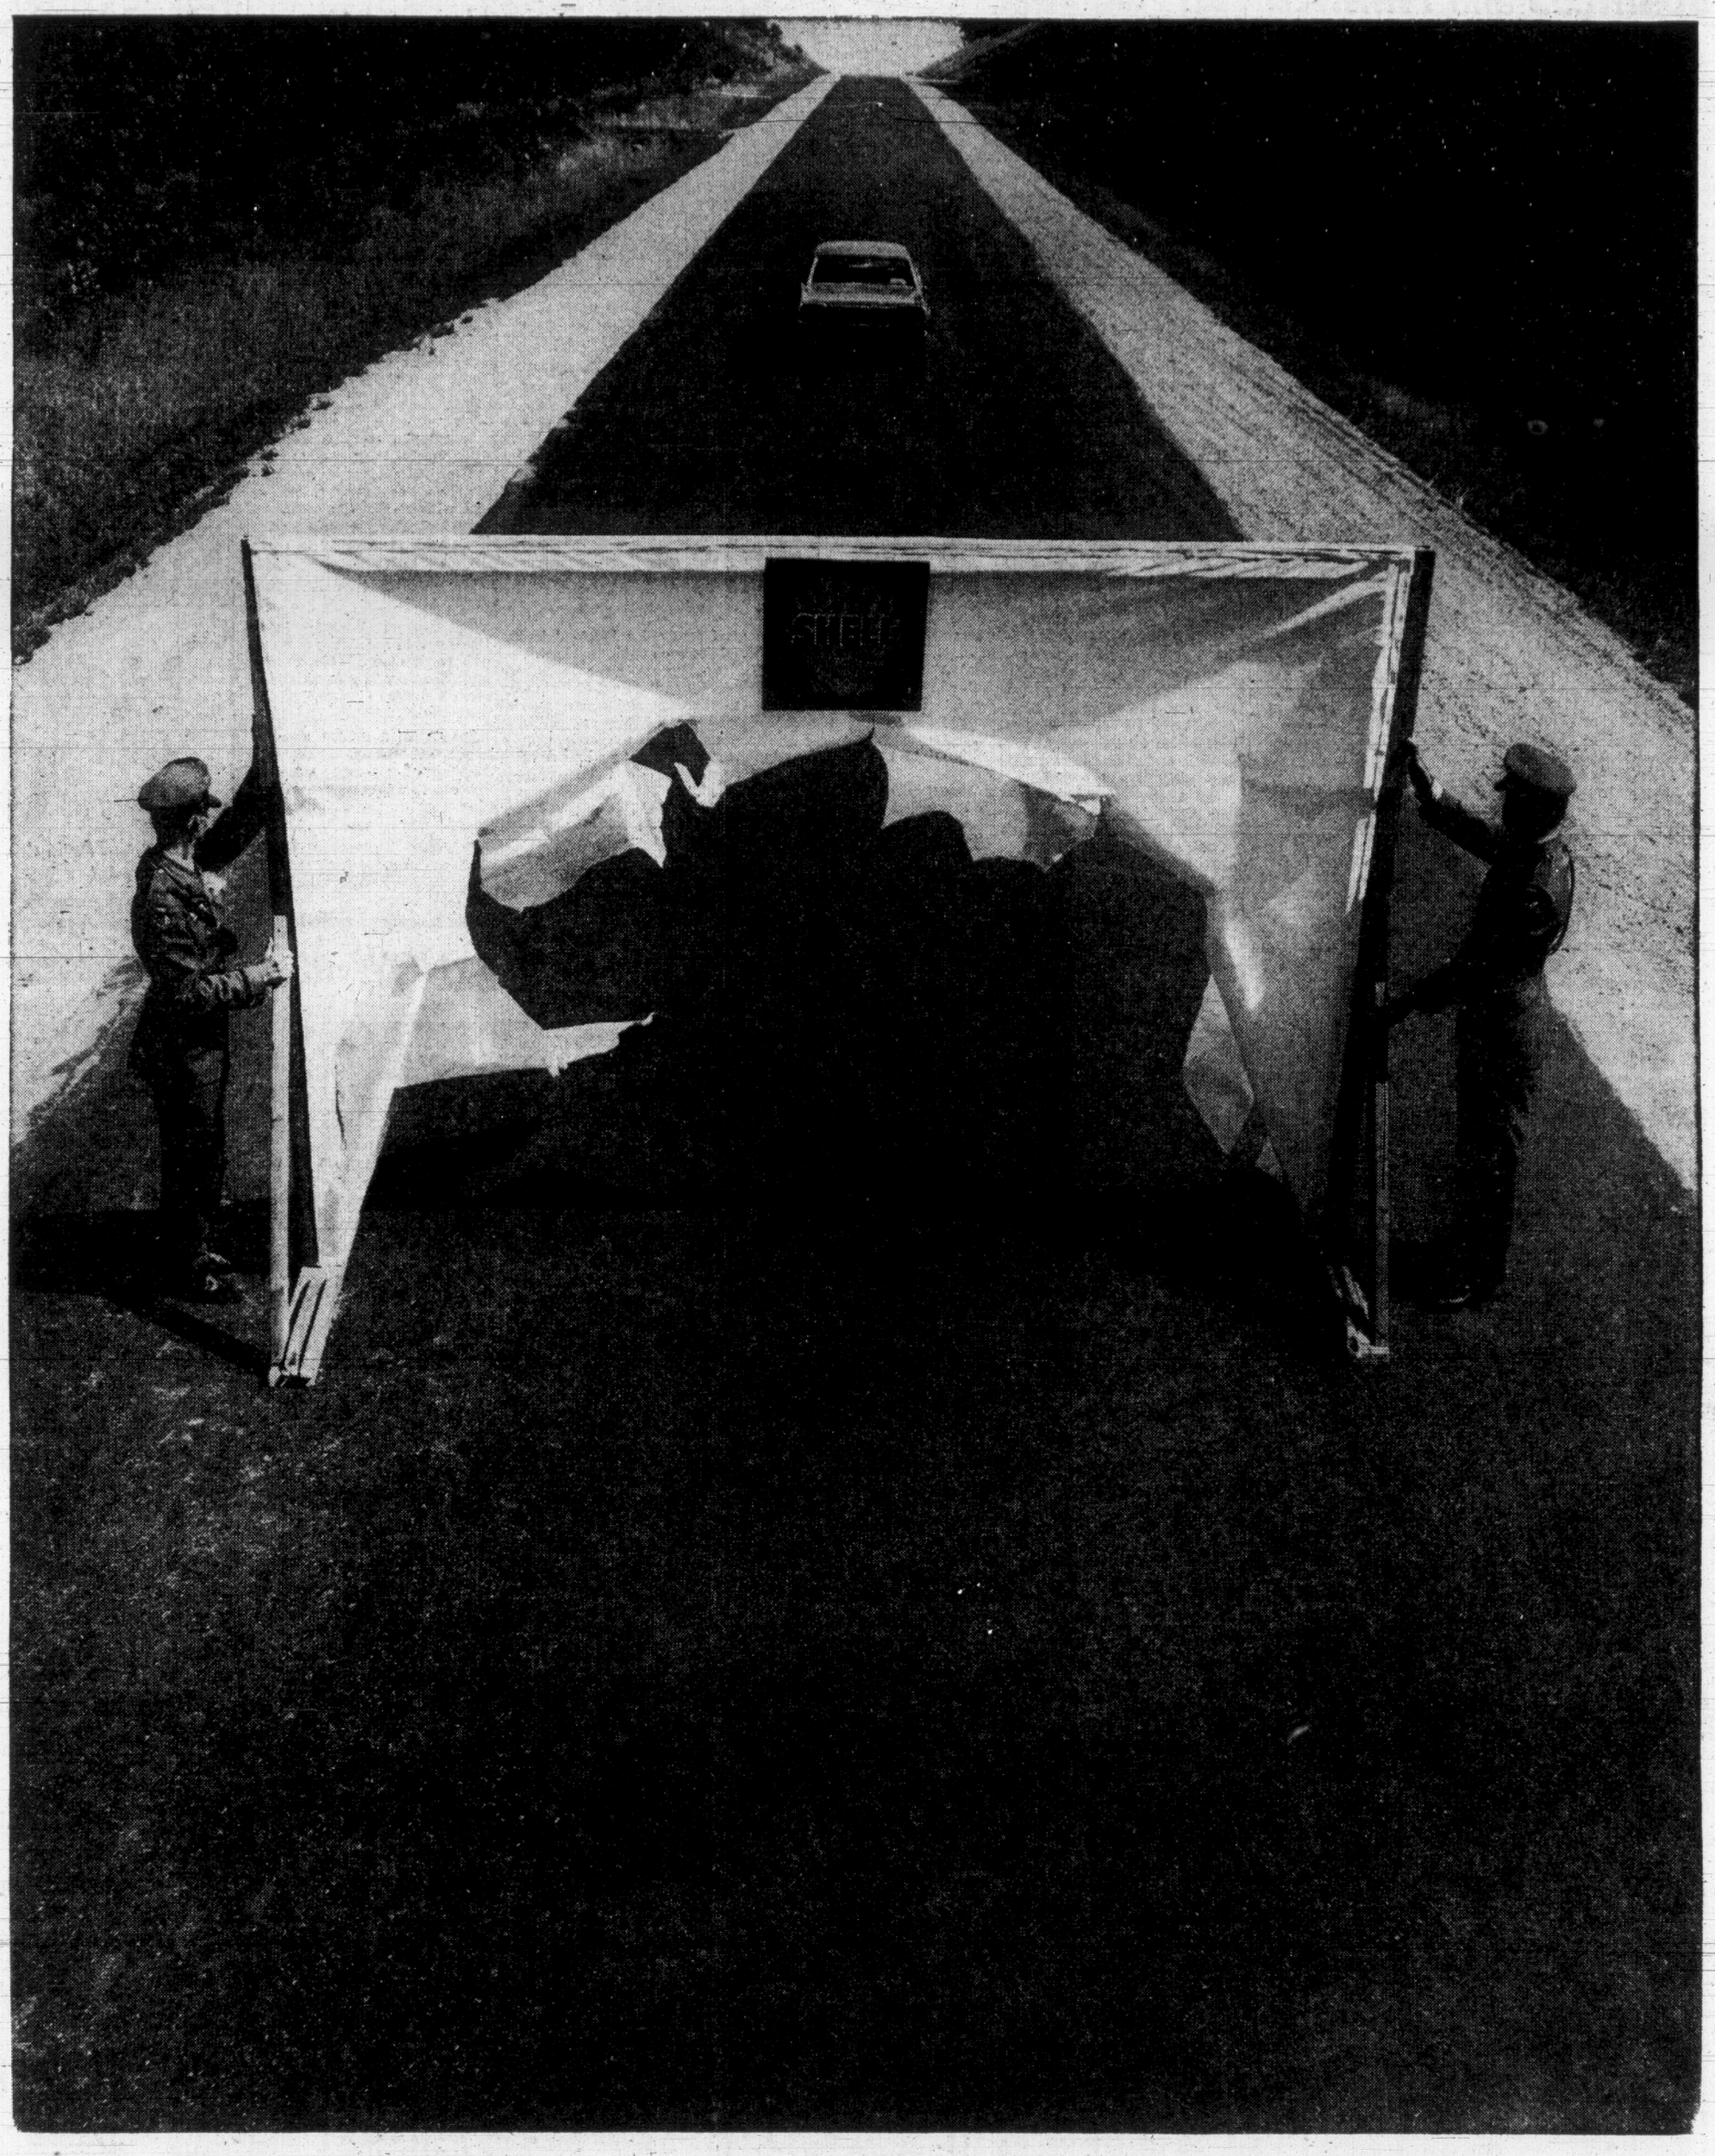

Trevor Lloyd, geography professor at McGill University and board chairman of the Arctic Institute of North America, told delegates at the 60th annual convention of the Special Libraries Association:

"Restrictions on access to certain areas, to the use of air photographs, maps and much other information and to the free international exchange of data has inhibited the free development of research."

Lack of planning will lead to "an environmental shambles in the name of 'development'" and "miniature subtopian monstrosities dotting the tundra."

About 1,500 delegates from North America and overseas are attending the convention in Montreal until today. The association represents about 7,000 specialized libraries in business, government and educational institutions.

Earlier Wednesday, Harry Campbell, chief librarian of Toronto public libraries and other information services in Canada will cost $350,000,000 a year by 1975.

Something as simple as a new Shell air filter can give you 10% better mileage.

We want you to get the best possible mileage from your car. Because mileage is our business.

The right air filter can help.

Your engine needs about 7,500 gallons of air for every gallon of gasoline. If you're driving with a dirty air filter, you're blocking the air flow and wasting gasoline.

We have our own special air filter that exceeds car manufacturers' specifications. And it takes 5 minutes to install.

Result: your engine will run at top efficiency and you'll get better mileage. You could cut your gasoline bill by as much as 10%. (Save $1 for every $10 worth of gasoline.)

Our 32 mileage secrets

You'll get better mileage with a clean air filter, new spark plugs and the right tire pressure. These are three of our 32 mileage secrets.

Your Shell dealer knows them all. He wants everything right with your car when he fills your tank—so Super Shell can really show off.

Super Shell for good mileage

Super Shell is a blend of many ingredients. Five of them will help you to better mileage.

For example, Platformate contains extra-energy petroleum molecules. Extra-energy means extra mileage.

To keep your spark plugs from misfiring and wasting gasoline, we add TCP.

The quicker you start, the less gasoline you use before you get going. That's why we add Butane.

Deposits can build up inside the carburetor and hurt your mileage. Our detergent fights these deposits.

And the Mixed Pentanes help your engine warm up quickly to prevent misfiring, bucking, coughing and wasted fuel.

If you'd like to go farther, the man to see is your Shell dealer. For advice. And for Super Shell.

Edmonton Teepee Demonstrators Protest Housing Discrimination

EDMONTON (CP) — "You holler about us joining your society, but you don't even provide housing for us."

That was the message Marcel Piche, an Indian who, with his wife, is engaged in a dramatic protest against housing discrimination in Edmonton, gave Wednesday to a group of white high school students.

The students, from a Grade 11 and 12 sociology class at Edmonton's Jasper Place Composite High School, went to downtown Winston Churchill Square to interview Mr. and Mrs. Piche, who have set up a teepee on public property there to symbolize the plight of many like themselves who cannot get homes.

The students' teacher, Roger Soderston, asked Mr. Piche what could be said for a society in which pets can live in apartments but children cannot.

"It's your society, you tell us," he replied.

He and his wife say Edmonton landlords discriminate against people on welfare, people with families, and Indian people.

The Piches have lived in their teepee in the civic centre area since Friday.

CLOTHES GIFT

Sean Hughes, one of the 12 students who visited the Piches, said the sociology class was interested in the housing problem in the city and in discrimination against minority groups.

The discussion opened on a provocative note.

"Where do you get the money to buy such clothes," one of the girls asked Mrs. Piche.

"This," Mrs. Piche said looking down at her attractive yellow pant suit, "was given to me."

Sean Hughes asked Mrs. Piche: "How do you feel living in a white man's city?"

"The feelings of prejudice and discrimination are there," she replied.

Mr. Soderston asked what she expected from the demonstration.

"I don't expect the city to find me a home. I expect the city to do something about housing."

LANDLORDS CITED

"When I find a house, I'll move this teepee but I'll continue fighting about housing here," Mrs. Piche said.

In reply to Mr. Soderston's question regarding possible official reaction to the presence of the teepee, Mr. Piche said: "it would be to the city's embarrassment to move us out. There would be many irate citizens."

Lenora Slote asked if Mr. and Mrs. Piche had thought of moving outside Edmonton to find a house.

Mr. Piche said: "A person should be able to find housing here. It is not a question entirely of a lack of housing. It is the landlords as well."

"A lot of apartments won't even look at children."

In an interview, Grant Kruse, one of the students, said, "We need laws and legislation and we need to enforce existing laws" to solve housing needs.

One girl commented that it was ridiculous that welfare officials said they were shocked by housing conditions.

"They see it all the time, the social workers see it every day, but they tell the papers they are shocked."

Asked what he thought caused the housing problem, Sean said: "If you don't have the almighty dollar which this society runs on, you don't get anywhere."

Mr. Soderston, who took movies of the interview with Mr. and Mrs. Piche, said he will show it to other students at the school to help them understand the problem.

ROVING GANGS LOOT SHOPS, FIGHT POLICE

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Roving gangs clashed with police and looted stores in Hartford's predominantly Negro North End Wednesday night in this city's third straight night of street violence.

Police arrested 21 persons on charges including larceny, breaking and entering, breach of the peace and failure to disperse. Bond on suspected looters was set at $5,000.

Two-thirds of the city's police force was mobilized to quell the disturbances. Vast quantities of tear gas were used by gas-masked policemen.

Authorities said the roaming gangs at times numbered up to 250 persons.

Committee on Press Freedom Looks for Control Evidence

QUEBEC (CP)—The national assembly's committee on freedom of the press Wednesday studied a verbal dissection of a Montreal French-language newspaper for any possible trace of control in its news and editorial operations.

Andre Bureau, executive vice-president of La Presse, told the committee that by enumerating the content of a newspaper and explaining the work that goes into it, members could make up their minds about the possibility of control.

Mr. Bureau began his breakdown with the explanation that La Presse shares are held by La Corporation Gesco Ltd., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Gelco Ltd., controlled by financier Paul Desuarais of Montreal.

He said the news and editorial sections of the newspaper are separate and not dependent on the same authority.

The best way to appreciate the philosophy and standards of "the largest French-language newspaper in North America," he said, is to examine "what La Presse is not."

"First of all La Presse is not a journal of ideological combat. One must also remember that La Presse is not the organ of a political party.

IT'S NOT SENSATIONAL

"La Presse is not the spokesman for a particular class in society and neither is it a newspaper of sensationalism.

"When we make these distinctions, we start to see what La Presse is, a newspaper of general information."

"We believe that the notion of honesty is much closer to criteria we can meet and much more realistic in formulation and valuation."

Other points made by Mr. Bureau:

—Another La Presse standard is respect for the community conscience.

—The reader is told when he is reading articles other than news.

—News and publicity are separated.

—La Presse fulfils its social responsibility by taking part in campaigns of public interest.

—The newspaper tries to cover the whole field of human activity.

Vets Want Land Preference

PRINCE GEORGE, B.C. (CP) — The Pacific command of the Royal Canadian Legion moved Wednesday to restrict the sale of provincial crown lands to war veterans.

Delegates to the 29th biennial convention approved a resolution to petition the provincial government to heed the 1942 Veterans Land Act settlement agreement signed in 1956 between the federal and provincial government.

The legion wants such lands made available to veterans of her majestys forces and Canadian citizens for at least five years after they become available and before the citizens of other countries are given consideration.

The legion claims there is an increasing demand for all provincial lands by persons other than Canadians who are able to offer high prices for the property, particularly United States citizens.

The resolution said federal government interest resulted in the signing of the federal-provincial agreement to provide provincial land to veterans free provided they were settling under the provisions of the Veterans Land Act.

Interest in provincial lands has greatly increased since the building of highways on the Arrow Lakes, Columbia River and in Lardeau districts with buyers from other countries attempting to purchase property at escalated rates.

To date the provincial government has not sold any lands.

LOBLAW URGES MEAT BOYCOTT IN PRICE WAR

TORONTO (CP) — Leon Weinstein, president of Loblaw Groceterias Co. Ltd., has called for a consumer boycott of steaks and roasts to force down prices which have increased up to 40 per cent in the last four weeks.

He said the increases have resulted in "more phone calls in the past two weeks than in the past 2½ years."

An Emergent meeting will be held Friday, June 6th, at 7:30 p.m., for the purpose of a joint installation of officers of the Aerie and the Ladies' Auxiliary.

Incoming U.S. Chief Justice Expected to Remain Moderate

By JOHN P. MACKENZIE
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Warren E. Burger's style, personality and history on the bench, together with the Supreme Court's own traditions, all indicate that the chief justice designate will not kick over the court's liberal traces overnight.

Lawyers who know Judge Burger and his work consider that the same qualities that lead commentators to rate him a "conservative" jurist will continue to motivate him to go slowly in overturning recent criminal law precedent.

If these observers are correct, it would be surprising if Burger should vote at the first opportunity to overrule such controversial decisions as Miranda V. Arizona, the 1966 decision that requires police to warn prisoners of their rights.

There is little doubt that if Burger had been on the court three years ago he would have joined the minority of four — since shrunk to three — which objected to the mandatory new safeguards for criminal suspects.

But in the view of many conservatives, wholesale turnabouts on the basis of judicial voting power violate the conservative tradition in the law just as much as did the Miranda ruling on standards of police interrogation.

FAMOUS PROTEST

Justice Felix Frankfurther, latter-day idol of lawyers who consider themselves conservatives, voiced one of the most memorable protests against judicial power plays in his famous dissent to the 1950 decision in the United States vs. Rabinowitz, which relaxes a search-and-seizure rule the court had tightened only 20 months earlier.

Said Frankfurter:

"Especially ought the court not re-enforce needlessly the instabilities of our day by giving fair ground for the belief that law is the expression of chance — for instance, of unexpected changes in the court's composition and the contingencies in the choice of successors."

Burger's past handling of criminal doctrines indicates that he likes to build on mounting evidence from case to case before toppling a precedent. He looks to the experience under a criminal rule and collects his materials carefully.

That was the way Burger developed his opinions during the struggle over insanity standards that has engaged the United States Court of Appeals since 1954, two years before Burger was named to that bench.

Judge Burger supported the 1954 Durhan decision that held ... "an accused is not criminally responsible if his unlawful act was the product of mental diseases or mental defect." He also agreed with that decision's broadened definition of criminal insanity. The judge went so far as to blast one fellow conservative who inveighed against the Durhan rule.

DIOLOGUE DECLINED

But by 1961 Burger was writing that the Durham decision was "a wrong step but in the right direction," meaning that the rule had broadened the "scope of medical inquiry" into the mind of the accused but had put the psychiatrists too much in the driver's seat.

Later that year Burger took to the podium to announce that he would "resist the temptation to debate" on insanity with fellow judges who had been lecturing the general public on the virtues of the Durham rule.

He said he wanted "to make certain that the small but vocal minority who ignore or deny the moral baisis of the criminal law are not mistaken for the voice of the judiciary."

Stephen Alone Lauds Budget

Victoria's Mayor Hugh Stephen, apparently alone among fellow mayors meeting in Ottawa, has spoken favorably of federal Finance Minister Benson's anti-inflationary measure of slowing commercial growth in the city.

General reaction at the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities was opposition to the scheme which affects 22 rapid-growth cities in British Columbiam Alberta and Ontario, including Victoria and Vancouver.

Mayor Stephen said he thinks "the proposal is good. The battle against inflation is our most important national objective."

"My area will suffer but it's for a good cause."

Set out in Tuesday's federal budget, the measure will force owners of commercial buildings constructed between now and 1970 to wait two years before claiming depreciation as a deduction from taxable income.

This will ensure, said Benson, an adequate share of construction funds and resources for housing, schools and industrial plants.

"If there's going to be overcrowding, it is better that it take place in stores, offices and banks than in homes and factories."

Annual rate of depreciation allowed, to be deferred for two years now, is five per cent on a declining balance for most buildings, 10 per cent for wood-frame buildings.

Stephen said it would not be right "to holler against inflation as citizens of Canada" then cry "don't touch me" when some step was taken that will affect Victoria.

Mayor William Dennison of Toronto, whose city is affected by the deferments, asked the federation to make a study of the affects.

"If it is to be a general policy, it should apply to all cities," he said.

The capital cost allowance deferrals, expected to add four to six per cent to commercial construction costs, could cause a drop in assessment of the affected cities and make municipal tax increases necessary, Mayor Dennison said.

Calgary's Mayor Jack Leslie predicted his city could become a "depressed area" as a result.

Union to Urge Higher Exemptions on Tax

Resolutioss calling for higher income tax exemptions, new education financing and more secondary industry will be debated by Canadian Union of Public Employees at their provincial convention which opened at the Empress today.

About 140 delegates are at the annual conference which will consider 46 resolutions. It will conclude Sunday with a day-long seminar on labor relations and the new Mediation Commission Act.

CUPE has about 10,500 members in 92 B.C. locals and a national membership of 120,000, making it the largest union in the country next to the United Steelworkers of America.

National president Stanley Little of Ottawa was on hand for today's opening. Harry Greene of North Vancouver is the provincial president.

Among resolutions:

- A call for a $2,000 instead of the current $1,000 basic income tax exemption for adults and an exemption increase to $750 for each dependent child.
- A proposal that Canada withdraw from both NATO and NORAD.
- A call on the provincial government to promote secondary industry and minimize export of raw materials.

CUPE delegates will also be asked to support the B.C. Federation of Labour proposed boycott of the provincial government's new mediation commission.

More Action Threatened By Postmen

VANCOUVER (CP) — Letter carriers who staged a two-hour sitdown Monday in Vancouver and Burnaby have threatened more action unless the post office provides more help to sort and deliver mail.

Ray Andrus, local president of the letter carriers union, said following a meeting Wednesday night that the executive supports the action.

He said there will be more "strong action" if any of the members who took part in Monday's demonstration are disciplined.

The letter carriers were protesting heavy work loads they claimed have been building up since suspension of Saturday mail deliveries.

Study Shows Voter Affected by Parent

TORONTO (CP) — The way a man votes may be heavily influenced by whether his father or his mother wore the pants in the family when he was young.

A team of four professors from York University and the University of Toronto has reached this conclusion from a survey of 298 voters in the Toronto area.

The paper presented to the annual meeting of the Canadian Political Science Association deals with the psychological images people form in youth of their parents, "especially the parent who is the 'boss' in the family."

"Voters unconsciously see the boss' characteristics in the political leader they choose to support," say the social scientists.

The investigators were Dr. Irvine Schiffer, psychoanalyst; Paul Fox, political scientist, University of Toronto; Joseph Steiner, statistician; and Lionel Rubinoff, professor of philosophy at York.

A news release accompanying their report says they "tried to get behind a voter's choice to see why he marks his ballot for a certain leader."

"The team came to the conclusion that a major factor is the unconscious mind of the voter, which is permeated by his childhood image of the boss in his family.

"The boss may be father or mother but in either case the voter subsequently sees a close resemblance between the leader he chooses and the boss.

"The study, which took 3½ years to complete, used a computer to work out the results of the images of 298 Toronto and district voters who were polled in a lengthy questionnaire during the final three days of the 1965 Canadian federal election campaign."

Mothers may have more influence on Canadians than is generally thought, the study indicates.

"The mother was often seen as the boss in the family and the person with whom the voter identified the leader, regardless of whether it was the prime minister, Lester B. Pearson, Opposition Leader John Diefenbaker, or the New Democratic Party leader, Tommy Douglas."

About 600 people were approached in the study by volunteers and invited to fill in an 11-page questionnaire. About half the questionnaires were completed in enough detail so they could be coded for computer processing.

HOW DID BOSS VOTE?

Among other things, each person approached was asked to name the "boss" of his childhood household and its financial controller. He was also asked the political party of the "boss."

The report says one speculative inference "is derived from the observation that Mr. Pearson, the leader who received the most votes in this election, was imaged as a biparentally identifiable object to a higher degree than the other political leaders."

"Of the three leaders he drew the largest number and percentage of profiles casting him in the fused composite imagery of mother and father.

"This would suggest that although Canada has been viewed sociologically by many as a basically patriarchal society, this study would indicate that there is a more substantial balance in patriarchal and matriarchal elements in the psychodynamic imagery of at least this particular sample of one Canadian community."

Group Seeking Probe Of Vancouver Police

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Civil Liberties Association has asked Mayor Tom Campbell to conduct an independent investigation of police officers who arrested and allegedly beat a 28 - year - old Vancouver school teacher.

John Stanton, association president, said the teacher was picked up by two police constables in a car in the city May 1, and, after refusing to give his name, was thrown into a paddy wagon, hit by three police officers and driven to the city jail where he was locked up for the night.

The city lawyer said they let the teacher go the next morning but gave no explanation as to why he was picked up and thrown in jail.

Mr. Stanton said the mayor, in his capacity as Vancouver Police Commission chairman, should order an independent investigation to prevent any hint of a police department "whitewash."

Mayor Campbell said he sent the request from Mr. Stanton to police chief John Fisk and he will report his findings at the next commission meeting on June 12.

No other action will be taken until the chief completes his inquiry, the mayor said.

Private Interest Disclosure Poses Sticky Double Standard

By WILLIAM GREIDER

WASHINGTON (WP) — While senators and congressmen have waxed indignant over the subject of judicial purity, the issue promises to pose embarassing questions about their own rules for disclosing private interests.

In the wake of the Fortas affair, about a dozen bills have been introduced on both sides of the capitol to require some form of financial dosclosure for federal judges, including the supreme court.

Most of these measures go substantially beyond what the house and senate now require of themselves. If Congress does take some action on judicial ethics, this double standard is going to be part of the debate.

There currently are no rules requiring federal judges to report their off-the-bench earnings.

It was a choice coincidence that, at the same time they were condemning impropriety across the street at the supreme court building, congressmen were filing their first statements on their own private financial interests. The house and senate rules of ethics, requiring limited disclosures, were adopted by the last Congress, in the wake of involuntary financial disclouses about Sen. Thomas Dodd (D-Conn.) and Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D — N.Y.)

But if Justice Abe Fortas had been a senator, he would not have had to report anything to the public about the $20,000 he received from the family foundation of Louis Wolfson, now in federal prison for stock fraud.

EXCEPTIONS TO RULES

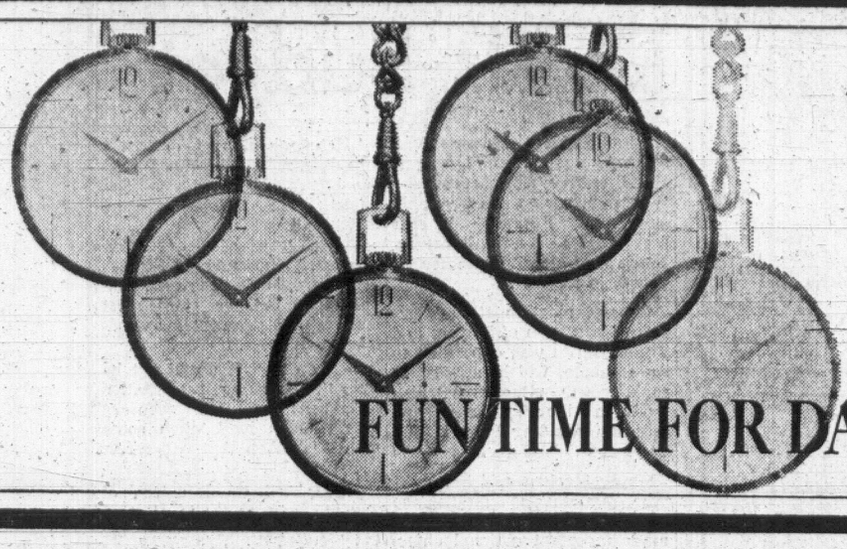

If Fortas had been serving in the house of representatives, his report might have said simply, "fee — Wolfson Family Foundation," without any public mention of the amount or the purpose.

This year's senate reports revealed that many senators earn impressive fees as dinner speakers. The house reports showed, among other things, that one in every five congressmen has a direct interest in the banking industry. But the disclosure rules are riddled with exceptions — the details on earnings and investments that are not made public.

Sen. Clifford P. Case (R — N.J.), a perennial advocate of full public disclouse, called the senate reporting this spring "an exercise in hyprocisy." Rep. Philip E. Ruppe (R — Mich.), who himself reported a portfolio of 100 stocks, said the house requirements are "a sham and a facade. A listing of holdings without accompanying fianancial statements is next to meaningless. Loopholes under the present reporting procedure are legion."

The ambiguties in the house reporting system were illustrated by the fact that 10 congressmen came back and revised their report after the April 30 deadline, adding private interests that they didn't report the first time around. Several explained that the disclousres weren't required by the rules but they were making them anyway.

VICTORIA, B.C., THURSDAY, JUNE 5, 1969 —PAGE 13

Arthur Mayse

Our hosts at Santa Barbara were out to accentuate the positive. But, while they didn't emphasize the negative factor of continuing oil leakage, neither did they insult our intelligence by insisting that everything was hunky-dory on that golden shore.

As the dourly outspoken Santa Barbara News-Press revealed in stories and pictures on the day of our fishing trip, it isn't.

That evening, I set out for a walk on sands that seemed to sway gently underfoot—an effect not produced by American bourbon but by hours on a rolling deck.

In front of the clustered tourist lodges, and on along the beach in the direction of the breakwater-sheltered boat harbor, the sand was clean to the surf-line. To check that visual impression, I took off shoes and socks and shuffled barefoot.

Earlier, oilmen had denied vigorously the charge that they'd brought fresh sand in to replace a crude-soaked natural supply. This stuff appeared to be ocean's authentic byproduct. Further, it left no stains.

Time to reverse direction. I walked back past the Santa Barbara Inn and the other hotels that face the ocean across a wide, palm-bordered thoroughfare.

After a day of brilliant California sunlight, the evening cool was welcome. A guitar spoke plaintively from a green strip above, where a clutch of boys and girls had gathered. Offshore on the leases, the lighted drilling platforms glowed like dim crescent moons across the miles of channel.

A few steps farther, and I caught the smell of crude oil.

★

I followed my nose down to wet sand washed by the rush and retreat of a gentle surf. Oil from the plastic-tented but still seeping main fissure in the channel patterned the band of beach exposed by the ebb.

The dark, wavering lines wandered in and out among the wrack of seaweed washed ashore by the day's strong winds. They ran on into the twilight for as far as I walked —stubborn reminders of a trouble not yet cured.

The chief source of that continuing visitation, oilmen had told us earlier, was a flukish breaching of sedimentary layers that roof the undersea oil pool.

Only once in 1,100 holes drilled off the California coast had the thing happened.

But happen it did, last January out where Union Oil Company's Platform 'A' now showed brighter with the coming of dusk.

Result: a menaced tourist trade, a tangle of claim and counter-claim, and a conservationist-backed stand by Santa Barbara city and county officials against further drilling.

★

As a visitor whose stay was brief, I'm in no position to offer expert comment on the Santa Barbara problem.

However, to their credit, the oilmen do seem to have conducted and paid for a fairly effective cleanup of the worst of the invasion.

We have never been hit by major oil spills in our South Island waters. That waits for the day when some holed and sunken tanker loses its cargo to the straits.

Against the chance, it might be well to note that by far the most effective agent of about 3,000 suggested to Santa Barbara was straw spread on the ocean. The straw, I was informed, soaked up as much as 10 times its volume in crude oil on its shoreward drift.

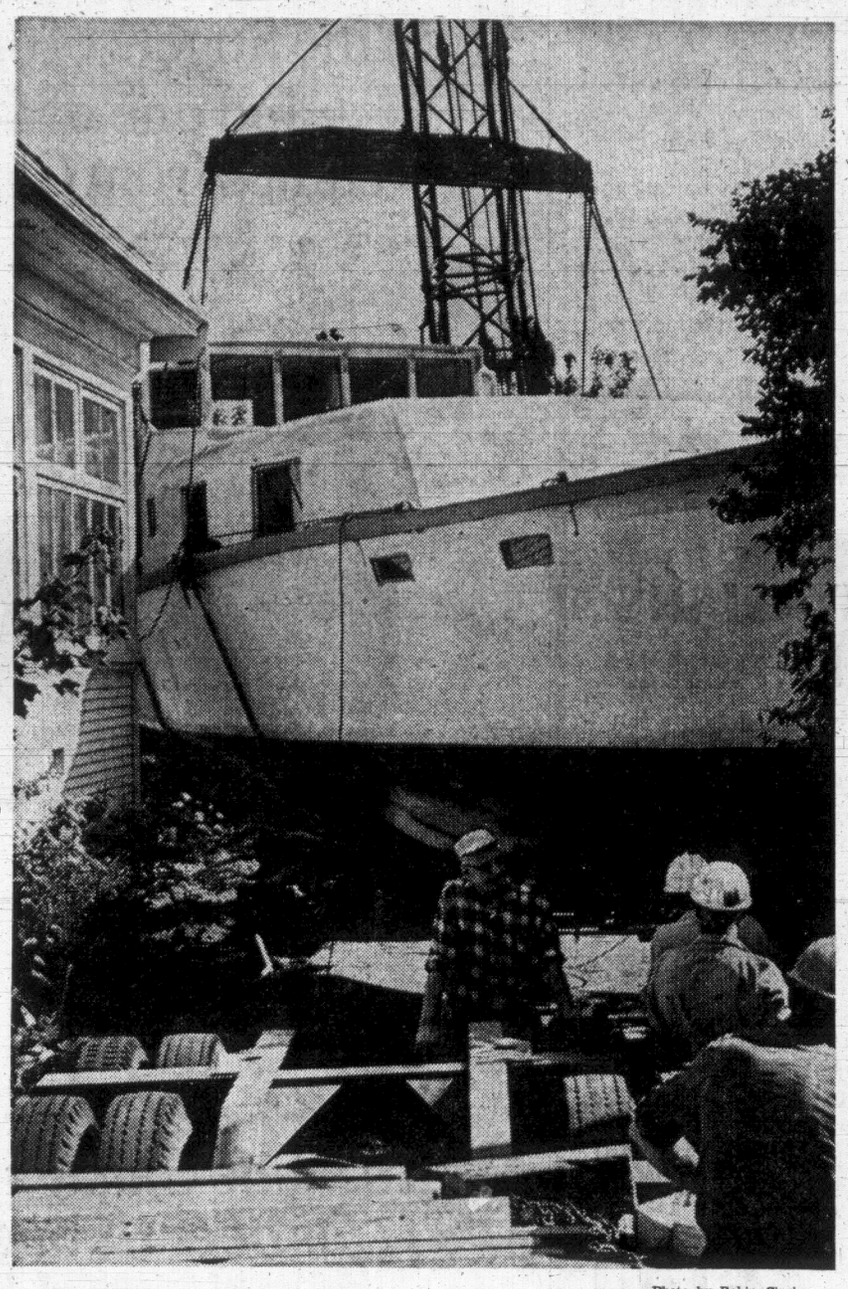

At tideline, it was bulldozed into heaps, trucked off, and burned.

I can also report from my own observations—which are not influenced by a gift spinning reel added to my gear—that Santa Barbara remains one of the loveliest and most pleasant cities I've ever had the luck to set foot in.

We have no palms worth speaking of here, and our mountain backdrops are borrowed from Washington State. Yet in an indefinable way, the place reminds me of Victoria.

And higher praise I can't bestow on any town.

BACKYARD BOTTLENECK faced by skipper "Mac" McCurdy, centre, and the trucking crew when they sprung his 41-foot troller Quest Wednesday from her Rithet Street "building yard" was solved by lots of patience, time and the shearing of eaves and bushes.

Man Builds Boat in Yard But There's One Little . . .

By PAT DUFOUR

Sixty-eight-year-old "Mac" McCurdy spent all his spare time in the past three years building a 41-foot troller in his backyard at 658 Rithet.

But when launching day came Wednesday, he had one little problem.

He couldn't get it out.

When he started his project Mac had a vacant lot behind his property and an easy departure route when it came time to put his vessel in the water. Two months ago, builders started erecting a four-storey apartment house on the lot, blocking his exit.

This meant that the boat, 14 foot in the beam, had to be squeezed through the narrow alleyway between the McCurdy's house and their next-door neighbors'.

After spending almost three hours prying the boat loose from her land-bound mooring, painstakingly swinging her into position and squeezing by the neighbors' barbecue by inches, the truckers found they could go no farther.

The only way would be to trim the overhanging eaves of their home. Mac and his wife, Esther, reluctantly agreed.

Then came the snail-like advance down the alleyway, made dangerous by the overhanging power lines.

By the time the truck and boat cargo were safely on the street a sizeable crowd had gathered, falling in behind as the truck made its way to Ogden Point and the crucial moment of launching.

Cameras clicked as the 11-ton trawler was swung into position and lowered into the water without incident.

Climbing aboard as she swung over the side of the jetty, the skipper said, "If I were a religious man, I'd give a prayer of thankfulness at this moment."

AGE IS REASON

This will be McCurdy's first crack at commercial fishing and he says his age is the reason he's decided to try it.

"No one wants to employ grey hairs."

Last April he retired for the second time, after being employed since 1964 as a mechanical technician in the University of Victoria's physics department.

But he's no stranger to the sea.

"My family has always lived around the water, I grew up with it."

Wednesday marked the launching of the 15th boat that McCurdy has built. Several of these were cabin cruisers built in Nova Scotia and one was an amphibious boat with retractable wheels which he build in St. Catharines, Ont.

HOSE FACTORIES

It was in St. Catharines that McCurdy first retired. He was running the last of five nylon hose factories that he's built. A moving piece of machinery fell on him, breaking both his legs and causing the phlebitis which plagues him to this day.

That was in 1961. The McCurdys headed for Victoria.

Instead of retiring as ordered by his doctor, McCurdy built himself a home on the Pat Bay Highway (one of seven he's constructed).

"When I sold out in Ontario I found myself bankrupt and had to start all over again. So I built the house, sold it, got myself a job at the university and started designing my next boat."

This was no mean feat in itself for a man slowed down with phelbitis and the sight of only one eye. The other has been operated on for cataracts.

In spite of his physical handicaps, McCurdy has no doubt that his third career will be successful. He's taken coastal navigation in a Greater Victoria night school course and has signed on a crew hand.

Lawrence Lambert, a 23-year-old electronics technician at the university, will be with McCurdy when he sets to sea June 15.

JAIL DEATH INQUEST CONTINUES

An inquest into the death of a man who died Friday in the city jail was adjourned Wednesday night after the jury viewed the body and heard identification evidence.

Anthony Ranger, 51, of no fixed address, was identified by a woman who said she lived with him.

The inquest will continue next Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the law courts.

The jury was told Ranger wore a brace around his neck as a result of a fall.

A police officer summoned a passerby on the street when one person failed to appear on the six-man jury.

Berger Raps Price Tag For B.C. Tel

The president of British Columbia Telephone got a wrong number, according to Opposition Leader Tom Berger.

He called "absurd and ridiculous" a statement by J. Ernest Richardson that it will cost $1 billion for the government to take over the utility.

Berger told a press conference in Vancouver there was an "$822 million credibility gap" between Richardson's and former president Cyrus McLean's estimate.

The New Democratic Party leader said McLean's figure of $178 million is more logical.

Berger announced May 14 that if he leads the next government, B.C. Tel will be taken over by the province.

Health Hazard Seen In Cut Drug Flood

Teenyboppers Pool Weekly Allowances

By STEVE HUME

LSD and other soft drugs currently being taken on a massive scale by Victoria's drug-using youth are being adulterated with a family of drugs potentially as dangerous as heroin.

Young drug users have told the Times that the quantity and use of LSD in Victoria has proliferated tremendously in recent months.

"You wouldn't believe the amount of LSD circulating," said one youngster, who said he was in touch with the "heavy drug scene".

He said most dealing in the drug is done among the teenagers who use it on weekends when they have allowance money available.

"Right now it's at the point where some of the teenyboppers are pooling their allowances to buy 15 or 20 capsules and then dealing it to their close circle of friends," the youth said.

Amphetamines and methamphetamines, particularly dexedrine and in lesser quantities methedrine and benzedrine, are being used extensively to dilute everything from the psychotomimetic LSD or "acid," to the relatively mild mescaline, several young drug-users have told the Times.

"There is no pure acid in Victoria," one 20-year-old said, "and as far as I know it has always been cut with speed (amphetamines)."

"It's ironic," said one of his teen-age companions, "that a lot of kids that think of themselves as acid-heads have never experienced a real acid high. They've been running all along on speed."

They agreed that LSD in Victoria is available in large quantities, and can be obtained relatively quickly in the street market.

COMPLEX DANGERS

A high RCMP official agreed there is "a pretty fair market" in the city for drugs classified as speed in hip jargon.

The dangers involved in regular or prolonged use of the amphetamines and methamphetamines are complex, according to medical sources.

Dr. Roy Sutherland, a practising physician, said oral amphetamines like dexedrine and benzedrine are stimulants which affect the brain and spinal column.

Methedrine, the most commonly injected methamphetamine, known among drug users as crystal, is used by a minority of Victoria "heads," the youngsters told the Times.

LIKE FREIGHT TRAIN

It, too, affects the brain and spinal column as a stimulant, said Dr. Sutherland.

While the stimulants known as speed have a dramatic effect on the human system — one user said it was like a freight train going through his blood stream — the most serious dangers do not lie in immediate use.

What happens, Mr. Sutherland says, is that under prolonged use, the body's metabolism is speeded up and the effects over a long period of time can be similar to driving a car at too high rmp's.

"People can be blown up, just like car engines can be blown up," he said.

In a typical progression of methedrine injection, the user experiences a "run" of hyperactive behavior in which he finds it difficult to sleep and to eat.

OPEN TO DISEASE

This, said Dr. Sutherland, is where the real, and hidden, danger of getting "strung-out" on speed lies, because it depletes the body reserves of energy and drastically lowers resistance to even minor diseases and infections.

He said the users who are injecting or "cranking" crystal are extremely vulnerable to serious cases of bacteremia, septicemia and infectious hepatitis.

Because of the lowered resistance even the common cold can be extremely dangerous to the "speed-freak."

Other immediate effects of oral amphetamines being used as heavy substitutes in Victoria supplies of LSD are confusion, unpredictable and irrational behavior, and possible violence.

There is a strong possibility of psychological dependence on the oral amphetamines, Dr. Sutherland said, and combined with a rising body tolerance level there can be a further danger of overdose.

He said more and more speed is required for less and less of a high as the body builds a tolerance to the drug, and said he knew of some psychologically addicted individuals using huge doses of 1,700 miligrams a day for a minor high.

ACUTE PARANOIA

With injected methamphetamines, like crystal, there is a danger of acute paranoia developing, because of extreme confusion and a zoom lens effect on the eyes which makes objects and people loom up immediately and then disappear abruptly.

A characteristic of speed freaks is the collection of weapons like guns or knives, and convictions that people are plotting against them.

Physical addiction and psychological dependence can develop with prolonged use of methedrine, and Charles Barber of the youth social work organization Cool-Aid says his information indicates heavy users of the drug have a maximum life expectancy of seven years left.

He said the maximum expected for a heroin addict is 15 years.

Barber said Cool-Aid is currently starting a campaign to educate young drug users to the latent dangers inherent in amphetamines in the hope they will turn away from the drugs classed as speed.

Quebec Said Hurting B.C.'s Olympics Bid

Quebec should bow out quietly in its bid for the 1976 Summer Olympics because it is hurting B.C.'s bid for the '76 winter Olympics, Recreation Minister Kenneth Kiernan said today.

He said the federal government, by this week's budget, is having to chip in an additional $125 million to bail out Expo 67, much more than the Canadian taxpayer originally agreed to pay.

And Quebec so far has submitted little of substance in connection with its Olympic bid while B.C. has prepared detailed engineering and feasibility studies and submitted a "comprehensive program" for the winter Olympics in Garibaldi Park.

HIGHLY UNLIKELY

"It is highly unlikely that one country will be given both the summer and winter Olympics," said the minister, entering this morning's cabinet meeting.

"We do not think that the Quebec bid for the Summer Olympics is an any way enhancing our bid for the winter Olympics."

$1,500 BAIL SET IN ARSON CHARGE

George B. Bruce, 43, 5013 Cordova Bay Road, was charged in central court Wednesday with two counts of arson following a $20,000 blaze which gutted two houses earlier in the day.

He was remanded without plea until Friday, when he said he would like to get a lawyer. Bail was set at $1,500.

He is charged with burning two houses at 5013 and 5013A Cordova Bay Road, property of Mrs. Rica J. P. Bruce.

New Crystal To Have Domes And Four Pools

By JIM HUME

Victoria's new Crystal Garden will contain four swimming pools covered by three geodesic domes.

That's the way the final design will look if the special swimming pool committee, scheduled to meet for a final round of design discussions this afternoon, likes the latest concept.

Architect John A. Di Castri declined comment on his latest design prior to select committee presentation later today.

But committee chairman, Ald. Percy Frampton, confirmed that the aquatic centre was almost ready for unveiling to the full recreation committee and the public.

Frampton said the entire concept is "very exciting" and added it is "hard not to wax enthusiastic".

Main Pool Will Be T-Shaped

While this afternoon's meeting will be behind closed doors and city officials are stoically refusing comment, Frampton confirmed what the Times has learned over the past two weeks.

- The main pool will be T-shaped, with a 50-metre pool comprising the main length and a 25-metre poool forming the top of the T.
- The 25-metre section will also have diving wells for two three-metre towers and two one-metre towers.
- Both pools can be used for competitive or recreational swimming.
- The complex will also contain two other pools, one termed a familiarization pool with water varying in depth from six inches to 15 inches, the other, a training pool with water varying in depth from two feet to four feet.
- Observation windows will be built below the surface in the diving sections to enable coaches to observe trainees under water.
- The two intermediate pools will be built at levels different to the 50 and 25-metre pools.
- Provision will be made for seating accommodation for 900 spectators.

Latest Design Almost 'Perfect'

Frampton cautioned that today's meeting is merely to discuss final design.

"There could be some changes," he said. "But I think this latest design is just about perfect."

He added that following today's meeting it was hoped a full committee meeting could be called within the next few weeks for endorsement before proceeding to city council for approval.

Frampton said an earlier design by Di Castri had been sent back for revamping after it proved too rich for the city's financial blood.

"But that was a dream pool," he said. "We instructed Di Castri to put everything into the pool that we would like to have if we had unlimited funds.

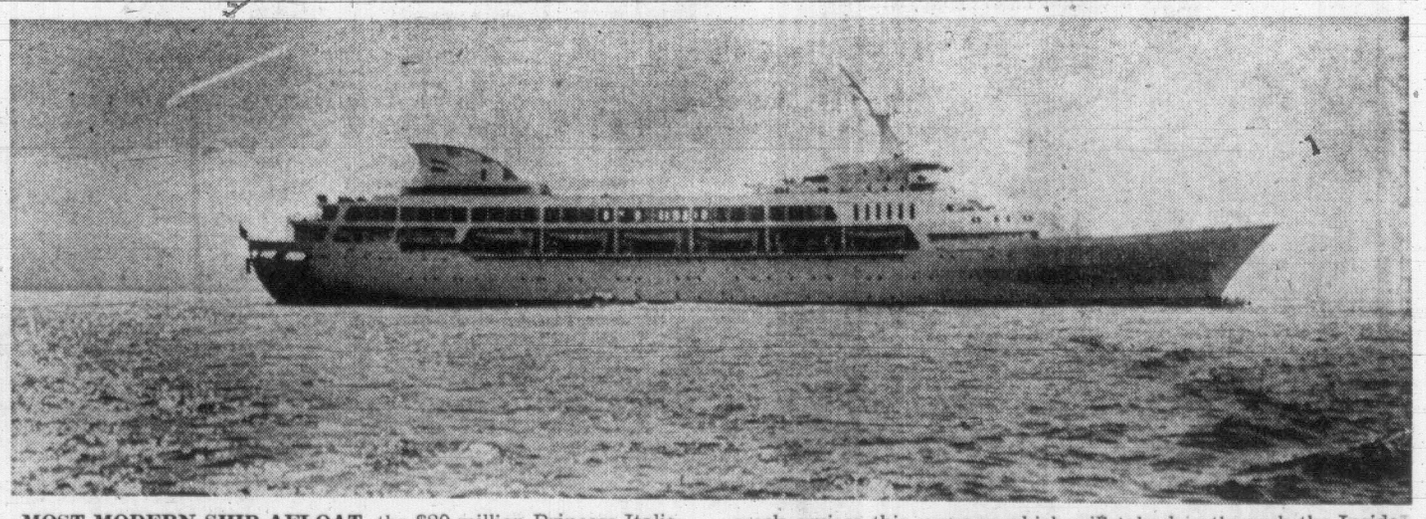

"From that point we started to trim back to the budget and this is what we were looking at this afternoon—a tremendous concept within the budget."

Cost has been estimated at $1.6 million.

General location of the pool has been established roughly between Royal Athletic Park and the Curling Rink.

The three geodesic domes covering the complex will be of varying sizes.

In construction circles a geodesic dome is "a design to reduce structural stress, to reduce the weight of the structure to a point at which building and the manufacture of building parts will be more economical."

MOST MODERN SHIP AFLOAT, the $20 million Princess Italia, arrives in Victoria nine days from now, the first luxury liner to provide regularly-scheduled cruise service between San Francisco and Alaska via British Columbia coastal waters since the Klondike gold rush days of 1898. She will lay over in Victoria June 14 and 15 and will make seven two-day stops locally during two-week cruises this summer which will take her through the Inside Passage. The 490-foot ship, built in Trieste, Italy, in 1967, carries 420 passengers and a crew of 250. She will also be stopping at Vancouver and Prince Rupert, as well as Ketchikan, Juneau and Skagway in Alaska. Following her Alaska voyages she will make a 42-day cruise to the South Pacific.

Historic Agreement Advances Biculture

QUEBEC (CP) — The premiers of Quebec and Ontario Wednesday signed a historic agreement on culture and education described as a model for intergovernmental relations in the Canada of tomorrow.

Under the agreement, first of its kind between two provinces, Quebec and Ontario undertake to provide public services in the French and English languages "wherever feasible."

An atmosphere of bonne entente reigned at the signing ceremony in the old legislative council chamber where Ontario Premier John Robarts joked about the quality of his French.

In what Quebec Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand diplomatically described as "good French," Premier Robarts told a gathering of national assembly members:

FIRST STEP

"It is the first piece of intergovernmental machinery to be established in Canada dealing specifically with questions of language and culture.

"It is the first development in a movement which we hope will grow through the increased participation of all governments in Canada."

Premier Bertrand, chairman of the next premiers' conference which will be held here Aug. 5-7, said he has sent copies of the agreement to other premiers and to Prime Minister Trudeau.

ON AGENDA

Bertrand said he has recommended that the question of such interprovincial agreements be placed on the agenda of the August conference of provincial leaders.

The Quebec premier told reporters he expects Quebec will eventually sign similar agreements with New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island. He thinks the West will be "difficult."

"The two older provinces are showing what path should be followed in the Canada of tomorrow. This should help the younger provinces of the West to demonstrate a better understanding."

Established by the agreement is a permanent commission for Ontario-Quebec co-operation, which will administer a program of exchange at three levels—government administration, education and culture.

Each government will spend at least $150,000 a year on the agreement, which provides among other things for exchange of teachers, students, technical information and programs in educational broadcasting.

The key part of the agreement is considered here to be the statement of principle which Canada's two most populous provinces make about the French and English languages.

The agreement says:

PUBLIC SERVICE

"We will provide, within the area of our jurisdiction and wherever feasible, public service in the English and French languages.

"We will provide education, wherever feasible, to students of the French-speaking and English-speaking minority in the language of that minority. We will also provide them with the means to acquire a good command of the language of the majority."

Both premiers stressed the significance of this linguistic agreement "to strengthen and renew the spirit of our country."

Top Transplant Men to Discuss Future Surgery

MONTREAL (CP) — More than 100 top medical men, involved in the world's 129 heart transplant operations during the last 18 months, meet in a three-day symposium starting Friday to discuss the future of such surgery.

Of the 129 operations, 34 heart recipients still survive.

Delegates will include Dr. Christiaan Darnard, of Cape Town, South Africa, whose patient, Philip Blaiberg, received a replacement heart Jan. 2, 1968, and is the longest survivor of a heart transplant.

This is the second world heart transplant symposium. The first was organized by Dr. Barnard in Cape Town last July.

Also attending this weekend's sessions will be Dr. Denton A. Cooley of Houston, Tex., who has performed the most heart transplants—19. Two of his patients survive.

Topics to be discussed include:

Problems related to the choice of both donor and recipient; surgical technique and organ preservation; histocompatibility in heart transplants; and clinical and laboratory diagnosis of rejection.

The conference will be under general chairman Dr. Pierre Grondin and sponsored by the Quebec government.

Dr. Grondin has performed nine of Canada's 15 heart transplants at the Montreal Heart Institute. All have died.

John Parkinson, 53, who received a replacement heart at the Royal Victoria Hospital here last Nov. 3 continues to improve steadily.

Of five heart transplants performed in Toronto, Charles Johnston, 54, survives. He received his replacement heart last Nov. 17.

BENNETT TO DEDICATE NEW ARROW LAKE DAM

Civic workers and school children in the Castlegar-Kinnaird area will have a half-day holiday Monday when Premier Bennett officially dedicates the Arrow Dam.

Guests at the ceremony will include national and regional government representatives from both sides of the United States-Canada border and British Columbia business leaders.

Arrow Dam, which went into operation in October, is the second of three Columbia River Treaty projects to be officially opened.

The Arrow Boat Club and other clubs will demonstrate the dam's navigation lock.

Celgar, Ltd., will also demonstrate movement of log bundles through the lock.

Senate Leader Said 'Packing' Committee

OTTAWA (CP) — Senator A. H. McDonald, acting government leader in the Senate, was accused Tuesday night of trying to pack the Senate's legal affairs committee to sssure its approval of government legislation on hate literature.

Senator Gunnar Thorvaldson (PC—Manitoba) made the charge during a two-hour debate in the upper chamber on a government motion to substitute two Liberal senators on the committee with two others.

Several senators lost their tempers during the debate which also produced two recorded votes — rare in the Senate. The Liberals won both, one 32 to 22, the other 29 to 24.

When the debate ended, the government won its fight to place Senator G. P. Burchill (L—New Brunswick) and Senator W. J. Petten (L—Newfoundland) on the committee in place of Senator Maurice Lamontagne (L—Quebec) and Senator Andre Thompson (L—Ontario).

The government argued that Senator Lamontagne is too busy with Senate science committee to attend the hearings of the legal affairs committee. It said Senator Thompson had to retire from the committee because of poor health.

Senator David Walker (PC—Ontario), who moved that the substitutions not take place until the committee voted on the hate legislation, said both senators had not attended committee sessions on a regular basis for the last five months.

He said the government leader had not introduced the substitutions until the government came close to losing a vote in the committee.

Twice the Conservatives tried to postpone debate on the substitutions. Both times they were outvoted by the government side.

Standing in the 102-seat Senate: Liberal 61, Conservative 28, Independent 2, Independent Liberal 1, vacant 10.

More Rioters Killed

HYDERABAD, India (Reuters) Officials reported seven persons were killed Wednesday after police opened fire on separatist demonstrations, bringing the death toll in three days of rioting to at least 19. Police opened fire in five different places in the twin cities of Hyderabad and Secunderabad as violent crowds of Telengana separatists roamed the streets, clashing with "integrationists," who want Telangana to remain part of Andhra Pradesh state.

THE BELMONT STORY

Frank Stewed For Two Days, Then Decided

NEW YORK (CP)—Frank McMahon, 66-year-old oil millionaire from Vancouver and Calgary, personally made the decision to ship unbeaten Majestic Prince to Belmont Park for a possible try at winning racing's triple crown for three-year-olds.

McMahon is quoted to this effect in this week's edition of Sports Illustrated, in a story by Whitney Tower.

"Nobody made this decision but myself," McMahon is quoted as saying in telling why he over-ruled two close advisers—trainer Johnny Longden and Leslie Combs of Kentucky, breeder of the magnificent chestnut colt that won the Kentucky Derby and the Preakneses.

McMahon also discusss the possible motives of Longden and Combs in recommending, shortly after Majestic Prince won the Preakness on May 17, that the colt be rested, skipping the Belmont.

"When Johnny told me he felt the colt needed a rest, I went along with his decision. I felt that if he was all that tired, Majestic Prince should remain at Pimlico awhile and then come on to Belmont anyway to see how he progressed. What disappointed me, to say the least, was that without my knowledge, Longden ordered a plane for California . . ."

McMahon says he stewed about the decision for two days and two nights. Then he called Longden and told him the horse had to go to Belmont and run in the Stakes, if fit.

"Johnny listened to me and then replied, 'If you want the press to train the horse, that's OK with me.' I answered him quickly, 'The press is not training this horse. You are. Do you think he can win the Belmont?'

'Yes,' said Longdon, 'he can win.' 'OK, that's what I want you to do; do your best to win the Belmont.' "

Advisers Might Enjoy Some Gains

The motives of his advisers? McMahon in the magazine article suggests that Combs has other Raise a Native offspring to sell. In addition, Combs eventually will stand Majestic Prince at his Lexington, Ky., farm.

"Wouldn't he or any other breeder feel better to be standing a richer and undefeated stallion than one who had been beaten in the Belmont?

"As for Longden, he must have a lot of money buried away somewhere, but he knows that he could probably make more, on his percentage of purses, by skipping the Belmont, resting up and winning a lot of other races on the West Coast and in Chicago against inferior competition."

Leslie Combs' answer to McMahon, as quoted by Tower, was:

"Somebody must be putting pressure on Frank to run in the Belmont, and I don't know who is doing it or why. It's a tough race, and if the colt isn't at his peak it would be terrible to have him beat. That's what I'm thinking of. A horse is not like a machine. You can't run 'em when you want to. You run when the horse shows you he's ready.

"Being a good sport is OK, but what's the point in being a good sport if you think the horse may be beat? Majestic Prince didn't look as good at Pimlico as he did at Churchill Downs."

$73,380 for Six Months of Work

Longden tried to set the record straight on a statement attributed to him right after Pimlico. Newspapers quoted him as saying:

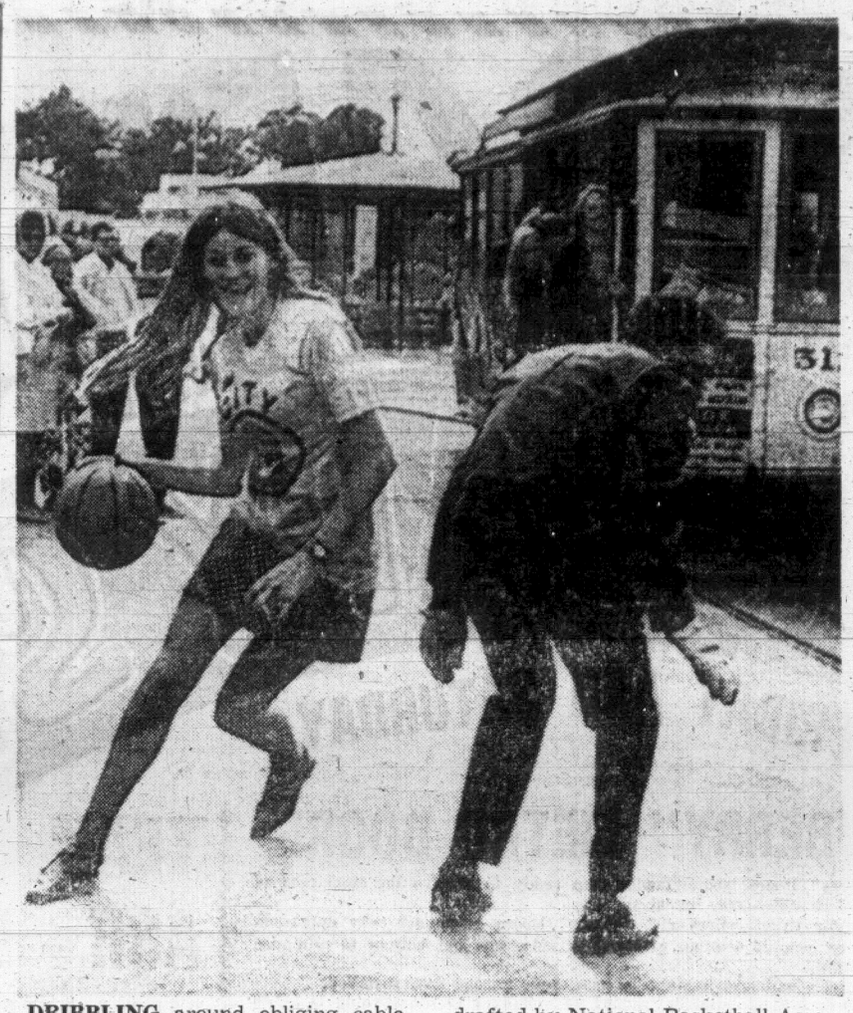

"I checked back and found that horses that run in the Belmont haven't been worth a damn after that. I mean as race horses. I don't want to make the same mistake."

It is true that Count Fleet, winner of the triple crown in wartime 1943 with Longden in the saddle, never raced again after his 25-length Belmont victory. But others have won the Belmont and gone on to other triumphs, such as Nashua, Gallant Man, Sword Dancer, Jaipur, Quadrangle and Damascus.

"I didn't mean it the way it came out," says Longden. "I know there are good horses who won the Belmont. What I meant is that there are some who were not as good ever again."

Tower quotes McMahon as saying he pays Longden $25,000 a year and 15 per cent of all purses won by the McMahon horses in his care. McMahon also says he gave both Longden and jockey Bill Hartack $5,000 each after the Santa Anita Derby, the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness.

Sports Illustrated puts Longden's earnings on Majestic Prince at $73,380 in six months of racing, counting the $15,000 in bonuses.

18-YEAR-OLD . . . . . . A DRAFT CHOICE

Hoop Offer Intriguing

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — "The first thing I thought when I heard I'd been drafted," says Denise Long, "was, 'do I have to play?' I thought it was like the army."

After she learned the choice was strictly hers, and that being drafted by San Francisco Warriors of the National Basketball Association was something more than just a publicity gimmick, Denise became intrigued by the idea of playing professional basketball.

So Wednesday she arrived in San Francisco to see if, maybe, she could play—and go to college at the same time.

Warriors' owner Franklin Mieuli was in Detroit at National Basketball Association meetings when Denise, her parents and sister arrived. But he is due back today and has promised to take her for a look at several colleges.

If she can find one she likes, and if she and Mieuli can agree to terms, she could be the mainstay of a girls' league that would play before the Warriors' regular games next season.

Denise, 18, averaged 69 points a game during her senior year in high school in Whitten, Iowa. She is five feet, 11 inches.

Phantom Backfielder In Football

WINNIPEG (CP) — A phantom player dubbed "Benson" may be running through the backfields of Canadian Football League teams this coming season.

His name won't be on anyone's roster, he won't wear a number and he won't catch any passes or make any tackles—but he'll be a real problem for team officials.

"We call him Benson after Finance Minister Edgar Benson," CSL statistician Greg Fulton said.

"The proposed five-per-cent tax on airline fares will have the effect of adding one player—in terms of travel expenses—to each team's roster."

LOEB WELCOMED

The ghostly Benson was only one of the chores the CFL dealt with Wednesday—others included further work toward a 1970 schedule, site and date of the 1970 Grey Cup game, possible common draft of United States-trained Canadian players and welcome of newcomber David Loeb of Ottawa to the league.

Loeb is the Ottawa grocer who paid nearly $750,000 recently to purchase he Grey Cup champin Rough Riders.

The general managers of the nine CFL clubs have met for two days; the Eastern and Western conference have held separate meetings for one afternoon.

Today, the CFL executive meets in semi-annual conclave.

Among other things, the CFL is expected to hear bids from Hamilton, Toronto and Vancouver to play host to thhe 1970 Grey Cup classic.

RCMP CLAIM GAME

Colwood RCMP romped to their sixth straight exhibition softball victory on Wednesday, downing Victoria City Police 13-7 at Royal Roads.

LEADING rusher with Ottawa Roughriders for past four seasons, halfback Bo Scott (above) has been signed by Cleveland Browns of National Football League. Scott played out option with Canadian team last season.

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — The International Soccer Federation FIFA formally excluded North Korea from the preliminary round of the world soccer cup because it refused to play Israel.

Is McLeod Finished With Nats?

WINNIPEG (CP) — Hap Emms, boss of Hockey Canada, met members of Canada's national team until nearly midnight Wednesday night, then called a news conference for today.

It was expected the team's new managing director would name a coach to succeed Jackie McLeod, who has led the squad nearly four years.

Emms discussed the future with national team members in Toronto and then met others in private talks here.

The owner of Niagara Falls Flyers of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series has said it will be mid-summer before the exact make-up of Canada's international squad will be known.

Not until the International Ice Hockey Federation has met in summer congress in Switzerland will it be known whether Canadian requests for an open world hockey championship will be met.

Canada's second choice is for "12 to 14 professionals" on the national team or, failing that, a minimum of six reconstituted pros, a proposition already favored by IIHF authorities.

RETAIN NUCLEUS HERE

Emms has speculated that a firm nucleus of a national team will be retained in Winnipeg, with the team to carry Canada's colors into international competition being made up about three weeks before the world tournament.

Such a team would comprise "a smattering" of amateurs, juniors and professionals.

McLeod, 38, is a native of Swift Current, Sask., who overcame a polio handicap as a youth and went on to play 10 years as a pro, mostly in the minor leagues.

He was the top scorer in the 1961 world hockey championships with 10 goals when Trail Smoke Eaters won the tournament for the last time for Canada.

McLeod was a member of the unsuccessful 1962 Galt Terriers team and the Smoke Eaters squad of 1963.

He coached the senior Saskatoon Quakers and the junior Moose Jaw Canucks before taking over the national team in August, 1965.

The tough, wiry young coach operates a store in Swift Current and carries a commercial pilot's licence which he used during the recent airlines strike.

Only Bates Find Building Success

Bate Construction is not well known among rivals in the Major Men's Softball League as a builder — but rather as a destroyer.

They continued to sow destruction Wednesday, capturing their 11th victory in 12 starts by crushing cellar-dwelling Langford Drywall 10-2 at Central Park.

Gary Aiken eased the path to victory with a two-run homer to spark a six-run rally. He also brought in another run in the third with a double.

Jim Moody chipped in a double and two singles to add to the 14-hit Bate offensive.

Barry Jackson allowed only three hits to gain credit for victory.

Century Pressing Leaders

Unearned runs in each of the last two innings Wednesday vaulted Century Inn to within half a game of leading Lake Cowichan in Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League action at Heywood Avenue Park.

Century closed the gap by downing CFB Combos 2-1.

Mike Cox came across the plate in the sixth inning on an overthrow and Bill Mundie singled in Gord Rutherfrod to seal the win in the final frame.

Jim Buchan had presented Combos with the lead in the fifth inning by scoring on a passed ball.

Combos' pitcher Bob Harris held Century hitless for the first five innings and recorded seven strikeouts while going the distance.

Winning pitcher Cox allowed four hits and retired three batters.

SAVARD OUT . . . . . . AS SERVANT

Political Body-Check?

QUEBEC (CP) — A debate in the national assembly concerning the appointment of Montreal Canadiens' Serge Savard to a civil service post ended with the hockey player refusing the job Wednesday.

The 23-year-old National Hockey League defenceman said in an interview late Wednesday he had turned down a "part-time" position as deputy secretary in the public works department because debate over him had reached "such proportions."

In reply to a question by Liberal Pierre Laporte, Public Works Minister Armand Russell said Savard had been approached and offered the civil service job, that he had accepted and that his nomination now was subject to cabinet approval.

But earlier in the debate, Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand had denied such an offer had been made and Mr. Laporte expressed surprise that the premier should not know of the offer after spending last weekend on the hustings with the hockey player.

Savard added he knew nothing about public works but Mr. Russell said the star defenceman most valuable player in the playoffs had the necessary qualifications to fill the position.

Giants Too Much For Expos' Mauch

San Francisco Extends Montreal Losing Streak

By The Associated Press

Big Giants, little Giants . . . they're all 10 feet tall to Gene Mauch and his Montreal Expos.

The bottom of the San Francisco batting order fell upon Mauch Wednesday night, leading the Giants to an 8-3 victory over Montreal that ran the Expos' losing streak to 18 games—a record for major league expansion clubs.

Jack Hiat, Hal Lanier, pitcher Mike McCormick and Don Mason stroked the big hits off rookie Mike Wegener in a five-run fourth inning explosion that sent the Expos spinning within five losses of the all-time mark—set by Mauch's 1961 Philadelphia Phillies.

New York Mets, whose 17-game expansion tailspin in 1962 was eclipsed by Montreal, equalled their record-winning string of seven games by nipping Los Angeles Dodgers 1-0 in a 15-inning struggle.

The streaking San Diego Padres blanked Philadelphia Phillies 3-0, Cincinnati Reds swept past Pittsburgh Pirates 5-3, St. Louis Cardinals edged Atlanta Braves 4-3 and Chicago Cubs topped Houston Astros 5-4 in other National League games.

Wegener took a 3-0 lead into the fourth inning at Montreal, walked Willie Mays and then got two quick outs — Willie McCovey on a pop-up and Ken Henderson on strikes.

SENT GIANTS AHEAD

But Dave Marshall drew another walk, Hiat and Lanier rapped run-scoring singles and McCormick sent the Giants ahead 4-3 with a two-run double before Mason's RBI single capped the rally.

Three ninth-inning runs wrapped up McCormick's third victory and left Mauch bleeding sarcasm in he Montreal clubhouse.

"Mike Wegener was pitching great until ,... Hiat, Lanier, McCormick and Mason came up in the fourth," said the embattled Expos' pilot.

Lanier and Mason, who went into the game batting .221 and .214 respectively, each went 3-for-5 to pace the Giants' 12-hit attack.

The Mets broke a scoreless tie in the 15th when Tommie Agee raced home from first on a single by Wayne Garrett that skipped past centre fielder Willie Davis for a two-base error.

After Met second baseman Al Weis cut down pinch runner Billy Grabarkewitz at the plate in the top of the 15th on a brilliant defensive play, Bud Harrelson drew a leadoff walk from Pete Mikkelsen in the bottom half. Agee forced Harrelson at second, then sped around the bases when Davis overran Garrett's sharp single to centre.

The victory enabled the Mets to match their seven-game winning streak of July, 1966, and sent them two games over the .500 mark.

UNFORGOTTEN ART

Minnesota Twins manager Billy Martin says stealing home is not a forgotten art, but American League pitchers are having trouble getting the picture where Rod Carew is concerned.

The Twins' second baseman swiped home for the fifth time in five attempts this season in Minnesota's 4-2 victory over New York Yankees Wednesday night and closed in on a couple of records. He also rapped out three hits and raised his major league-leading average to .399.

Elsewhere, Baltimore Orioles trounced Oakland Athletics 6-1, Detroit Tigers nipped California Angels 5-4 in 10 innings, Cleveland Indians pounded Seattle Pilots 10-4 and Washington Senators beat Kansas City Royals 3-1. In the only afternoon action, Chicago White Sox hammered Boston Red Sox 7-2.

Bill Polz fanned 14 batters and allowed only two hits while powering Strathcona Hotel to a 3-1 victory over Esquimalt in a Vancouver Island Junior Men's Softball League game Wednesday at Bullen Park.

After both teams scored once in the first inning, Strathcona grabbed the win in the sixth on two hits and a pair of Esquimalt errors.

Stable Fire Destroys 43 Harness Horses

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — Fire raged through a public barn at Saratoga Raceway early today and killed 43 harness racing horses, the raceway reported. One of the dead was the well-known filly Jostle, winner of more than $40,000 last year.

Firemen said they had no chance to rescue any horses from the wood structure. A second barn housing standardbreds, caught fire but was saved.

No horses in the second barn were injured, firemen said.

There was no indication yet what caused the fire and no dollar estimate as to loss.

The fire is the second major disaster to strike the raceway this decade and the third since 1949.

Twenty-one horses were killed by fire that swept though a 30-stall barn on Oct. 7, 1961. The loss then, including barn and equipment, was valued at $150,000.

On Jan. 13, 1949, another 23 horses died when fire destroyed a winter stable. Again the loss of horses, barn and equipment was put at $150,000.

CHAMPION'S POLITICS INCONSISTENT

WINNIPEG (CP) — Head-coach Jim Champion of British Columbia Lions has costly political opinions.

In a recent celebrity dinner, the coach of the Western Football Conference club stated that if he had a vote he would cast it provincially for the Social Credit and federally for the Liberals.

He drew a $50 fine for "activity inconsistent with club policy," Lions' general-manager Denny Veitch said here Tuesday.

"However, I understand Jim has definite plans to appeal the decision."

Thirteen Lucky For Lakers

Unlucky "13" proved to be exactly the opposite for Lake Cowichan Lakers Wednesday night at Royal Athletic Park.

Lakers collected their first win in 13 starts by slipping by Gorge Hotel 6-5 on a fine performance by Harold Halvorson.

Halvorson bashed out a bases-loaded triple in the sixth inning and then scored what turned out to be the winning run on Ken Jubenville's groundout for a 6-4 lead.

Stan Gibb brought Gorge to within one run by singling in Daryl Proulx in the bottom of the inning but their batters in the final inning all went out on "pop-up" flies.

Tom Nicholson, who took over in the fourth inning, earned the win.

Tom Dheenshaw, Bob Jones and Brian Van Horne added single goals for the Port Alberni cause.

Butterfield had two goals and Keith Manns, Bill Cerenzia, Ron Sandnes, Dave Thien and Leigh Jeffs scored one each for Nanaimo.

GARY PLAYER'S GOLF CLASS:

BRING IT IN THE OPEN . . . . . . SAYS LEE ELDER

Racial Baiting Tough on Tourist

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Monsanto Open golf tournament officials said Wednesday that the racial slurs which Negro golfer Lee Elder said he received here were never called to their attention.

Elder said in Washington he would no longer play in the Monsanto and several other major tournaments because spectators had called him "Nigger and black boy."

"Nothing ever came to my attention," said Jim McCurtin, chairman of the March 13-16 Monsanto Open. "If anything had been reported to members of the field staff, they would have come to me."

"We've never had any trouble in Pensacola," said Jack Tuthill, Professional Golfers Association tournament director who lives here.

In Washington, Elder said he has decided to start skipping tournaments next year and "will never again play in Pensacola."

He said he will watch the crowds at several other tournaments in California, Florida and Tennessee next winter and, if conditions have not improved, he will drop them from his schedule.

"Things have got better in some places on the tour," Elder said Tuesday, "but there are three or four tournaments where I just can't play.

"I'm tired of being called Nigger or Black Boy," he said.

"It's just come to a head. I haven't said anything about this before but I feel I've held it underneath long enough and believe it should be brought out in the open."

Elder, who now lives in Washington, D.C., made his comments after qualifying for the U.S. Open at the Bethesda Country Club in nearby Maryland.

"It's very difficult for a Negro to play on the tour," he said.

"It's not only me but the others feel the same pressure from galleries. It's very hard to concentrate when you hear some of the comments."

There are 10 Negroes who are regulars on the tour including Charlie Sifford and his nephew, Curtis Sifford; the Browns, Pete, Cliff and Howard, who are not related, and George Johnson.

"They all get the same treatment," said Elder, who spent 10 years on the all-Negro golf circuit before joining the pro tour just over two years ago.

"I make my living from golf, so I play in about 30 tournaments a year," Elder said. "I like to go for those $100,000 tournaments but it's just too much in Pensacola so I'm going to pass it up. The money just isn't worth it."

Gorge Rivals Meet in Semis

They're clubmates, co-favorites and close personal friends. But Dorothy DeGirolamo and Shirley Naysmith were set for an important argument today because there is room for only one of the Gorge Vale golfers in the Victoria women's championship final.

The medalist, Mrs. DeGirolamo and defending champion Mrs. Naysmith, golfing pals since their teens, posted easy victories in quarter-final matches Wednesday at the Glen Meadows Golf and Country Club.

Both met headlong in today's semi-final rounds on the same course.

Mrs. DeGirolamo downed Velda Skillings of Royal Colwood, 7 and 5, while Mrs. Naysmith defeated another Colwood contender, Dale Shaw, 6 and 4.

Florence Chapman collected one of the semi berths for Colwood by eliminating clubmate Mike Price, 4 and 3.

Joan Lawson of Uplands, a three-time winner who sidelined Gert Pumfrey of Gorge Vale, 2 and 1, will provide the opposition for Mrs. Chapman.

Blakeney Captures Derby

EPSOM (AP) — The British-owned colt Blakeney won the Derby over a 1½-mile turf course today and landed the first prize of £63,108 ($164,080) for owner Arthur Budgett.

Shoemaker was second, the French-owned Prince Regent third and Moon Mountain, another French challenger, fourth.

Blakeney started at odds of 15 to 2. Shoemaker was 25 to 1, Prince Regent 13 to 2 and Moon Mountain 28 to 1 in the field of 26 runners.

Blakeney, a three-year-old bay colt by Hethersett out of Windmill Girl, was booted home in the last 50 yards by jockey Ernie Johnson.

Moon Mountain, Paddy's Progress and Shoemaker were the leaders as the field passed the three-furlong marker from home.

Ribofilio, owned by New Yorker Charles Engelhard, started favorite at odds of 7 to 2, but faded early in the race and never had a chance.

Ribofilio, a bay colt by Ribot out of Island Creek and bred in the United States, became suspect after he finished last in the one mile 2,000 Guineas at Newmarket.

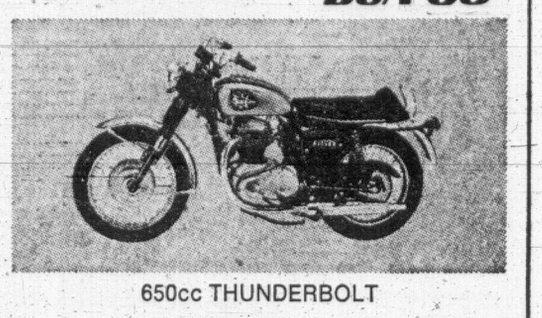

Then the colt had a public workout. Handlers said the colt was fit. And out he went in the Derby with British champion Jockey Lester Piggott aboard. But he never showed.

Glen Meadows Creates a Stir

Neophyte Glen Meadows is raising a few eyebrows among followers of Inter-Club Golf League competition for the Willie Park Driver.

Glen Meadows, which joined the competition this season, stepped to a ½-point lead over defending-champ Royal Colwood in one section while Gorge Vale grabbed a commanding edge in the other division following first-round play Wednesday.

Hal Jacobson and Brian Sluggett lent power to Glen Meadows by sweeping all three matches against Gordon Verley and Cliff Horwood of Victoria at Royal Colwood.

Gorge Vale collected points away from home as the Al MacLeod-Dave Mick and Mike Kolb-Gordie Jones pairings swept all six points from Uplands and Cedar Hill opposition.

Mick gained a measure of revenge for his loss on the first extra hole during the city junior tournament to Dave McCall by winning their match, 4 and 3.

Playoffs Settle Semi-Final Spots

Playoffs were required to determine section winners in the Corby-Wiser Cup men's triples competition at Victoria West Lawn Bowling Club.

The Burnside trio of Andy Dickie defeated Lionel Nichols of Victoria and Frank Hilliard of Oak Bay after the teams finished in a tie in round-robin play preceding tonight's semi-final competitions.

Jimmy McGregor of Victoria West also survived a playoff, winning a three-end decision from Hector Tapp of Victoria and Alec Donald of Burnside to join clubmate Ernie Stott and John Green of Oak Bay in the semis starting at 7.

Elementary Schools Track Finals Tonight

With jumping events completed at Lansdowne Junior High School, boys and girls of elementary-school age are eagerly awaiting the running events in the ninth annual all-schools track meet slated to start at 6 p.m. tonight in Centennial Stadium.

Approximately 200 young athletes will take part in the meet sponsored by the Greater Victoria Elementary Schools' Sports Association.

Suzanne Hibbert of Frank Hobbs captured the girls' long jump open title (over 12 years) with a leap of 14 feet, 1½ inches during the distaff jumping competitions.

Linda Love of Sir James Douglas cleared 4 feet, 2¼ inches to win the open high jump crown.

Monterey's John Douglas won the boys' open long jump on with a 16-foot 5¾-inch leap. Victoria West's Rodney Denleck cleared 4 feet, 8½ inches to take the high jump title.

BUG-GETA battles and beats slimy destructive garden slugs!

Before this weekend is over, crawling, slime-trailing slugs or snails can be out of your garden and out of your life. Your plants can be safe again.

ORTHO BUG-GETA does the trick. Just scatter the pellets or meal about your garden (especially around bedding plants or other low-growing plants) and give it a light sprinkle of water. That's all there is to it. Slugs and snails can't resist its metaldehyde lure.

Scatter a few handfuls every three weeks and you can lick your slug or snail problem for keeps. Used as directed, it's safe, effective, thrifty. Example: the six-pound box costs only $2.59 and covers 6800 square feet of garden.

Pick up a box of BUG-GETA today, wherever you buy garden supplies.

Emergencies Prolong Council

By WILLIS JOHNSON

KUALA LUMPUR (AP) — Malaysia once saw itself as an Asian example of parliamentary law and democracy. Now the word is "emergency" and many things are done in its name.

Thousands of persons have been arrested in the last month, the press has been muzzled and Parliament is suspended along with state assemblies.

No one can predict when democracy will return, but increasing numbers seem to be growing impatient with curfews and the extraordinary powers wielded by the National Emergency Council.

"What we need are not men of politics but of goodwill," said a council member.

AS A COVER?

But some politicians, especially those of the left, are saying the emergency is used for a cover for the council to remain in power indefinitely.

—The tempers of Malays and Chinese, who three weeks ago butchered each other in the streets of this capital, remain explosive. Their volatility, fed by distrust and talk of revenge, often has cornered the council into statements and actions that in themselves engender more distrust.

While the eight-man council warned of the dangers of rumors, the absence of hard news in the controlled press produced a fertile bed for gossip.

The council continually spoke of "further improvement" and a "return to normalcy." At the same time it admitted to "tensions and sensitive areas," arson attempts and sniping at security forces.

CRISIS WORRIES HIM

The prime minister, Tunku Abdul Rahman, 67, now considered a figurehead in the shadow of his deputy, Tun Abdul Razak, 47, the council chief, worries about the perpetuation of crisis through racial enmity.

Last month's rioting left 840 dead or missing, hundreds of homes and shops in ruins—and a harvest of hate.

Chinese make up 40 per cent of Malaysia's 10,000,000 people. Fifty per cent are Malay and the rest mostly Indians. The Chinese greatly outnumber Malays in this capital.

Many people fear continuing strife unless the structure of Malaysian society is changed. This is a touchy political issue because many laws tend to favor the Malays.

"Malays gave the Chinese citizenship overnight in exchange for special positions," a government official said, recalling the days of preparing for independence from Britain.

"If the Chinese want to unscramble the special positions, the Malays will say, 'Let's start unscrambling Chinese citizenship, too.'"

TO REDUCE GAP

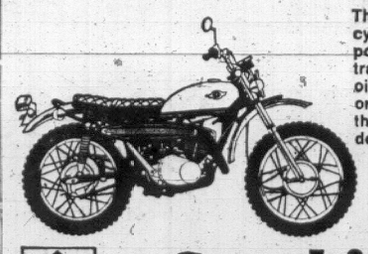

The plan, he said, was to reduce the gap between the industrious Chinese and the happy-go-lucky Malays who lacked education and business acumen.

Conflict led to the secession of Singapore in 1965. The government says Singapore had to get out because its 2,500,000 people, most of them Chinese, and its importance as a centre of commerce would tip the social structure. Singaporeans say they withdrew because they were tired of Malay domination.

Within Rahman's Alliance party, which has governed since independence in 1957, legislative seats have been divided among the party's distinct Malay, Chinese and Indian components. As far as the Chinese are concerned, their allotment never measured up to their role and numbers in society.

VICTORIA DAILY NEWSPAPERS

Former War and Bush Pilot Now Flying High on Ground

By ED GOULD

CHEMAINUS — Running an airplane maintenance base is pretty tame compared with racing hydroplanes, flying war planes in the Pacific and rescuing trappers as a flying Mountie.

But Frank Thomas, 48, manages to stay busy enough so his past experiences don't overshadow present and future.

As president of Chemainus-Crofton and district Chamber of Commerce and a member of the Rotary club, he's well involved in community affairs.

Licensed both as pilot and aircraft engineer, Thomas now runs an overhaul and maintenance base at Cassidy airport on the Trans-Canada highway between Ladysmith and Nanaimo.

He also owns Air, Air, Air Ltd., through which he soon hopes to assemble and market a new, side-by-side, fully-aerobatic New Zealand trainer aircraft for distribution throughout Canada and the United States.

FLOATS AND SKIS

Born in Martinborough, New Zealand, Thomas raced hydroplanes for sport until "I either lost my guts or got more brains" and war broke out in 1939.

He joined the Royal New Zealand Air Force and fought in the Pacific where he stayed until 1947, with the air transport command.

He came to Canada and Trans-Canada Airlines for a year then switched to the RCMP air division stationed at Vancouver. "It was floats all summer and skis all winter," Thomas said.

On northern patrols he experienced a lifetime of adventure and witnessed the legendary tenacity of the northerners.

He told of one old rheumatic trapper who knew he was going to die cold and alone in his remote cabin. "He wrote out his will, shot his dogs so they wouldn't starve, and then climbed into his bunk and froze to death," Thomas recalled.

STARVING FAMILY

Northern patrols meant constant searches. "We were always looking for somebody," he said.

Once the RCMP plane landed in bad weather near a cabin on the Babine River. It was inhabited by a blind grandfather and his five starving grandchildren who were living on rabbit skins while their parents worked a trapline.

It was a time of low fur prices and the family was extremely poor. "We had seen a person walking along the frozen river," Thomas said. "It turned out to be the grandmother who walked in with a sack of flour she had packed 35 miles."

After that it seemed a small gesture, but they cooked a meal and gave the family all the emergency rations from the plane.

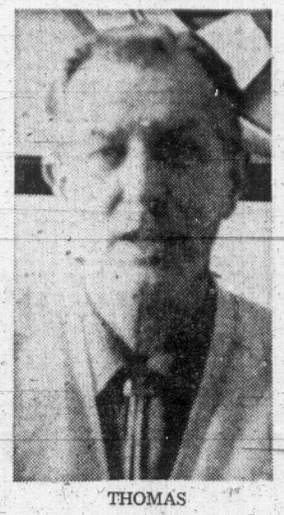

FERRIED EXECUTIVES

After five years of northern patrols Thomas quit the Mounties and took a job in Calgary with Shell Canada Limited flying company executives mainly to northern oil exploration points.

He couldn't get used to the weird northern summers of almost continuous sunlight. "We slept in tents where the temperature would be 55 degrees at midnight, the potatoes would be growing and the mosquitoes still flying."

Shell closed their Calgary office and Thomas had to fly out of Edmonton, which meant all northern trips. "I was beginning to itch for some year-round warm weather so I quit and joined Pacific Coastal Airlines at Cassidy in 1965," he said.

With maintenance work increasing due to more and more people flying planes, his club and Chamber of Commerce projects, and a wife and two daughters, Thomas figures he'll have lots to do to keep busy.

Endangered Falcons Get More Protection

The B.C. Fish and Wildlife branch has tightened its controls on taking peregrin falcons from the Queen Charlotte Islands.

The bird-of-prey is in danger of extinction in British Columbia and the branch seeks to ensure the species survival in the province.

Falconers, hunters and pesticides are mainly to blame for reducing the population of the falcon — once fairly common throughout North America.

Under the new policy, the maximum number to be taken from the Queen Charlotte Islands in 1969 is 10, but it may be less depending upon an inventory of the bird's population, now taking place.

$200 FEE

The birds will only be collected by officials of the branch.

In the past, individuals were allowed to collect their own birds after obtaining a permit from the branch.

Fee for collecting has been set at $200 for each bird. This is to cover costs involved in capturing the falcon.

A wildlife official said the new ruling prohibiting individuals to collect the birds will greatly reduce the disturbance to nesting falcons.

Bus Drivers, Janitors End School Strike

LAKE COWICHAN — Twenty-five bus drivers, maintenance men and janitors went back to work for Lake Cowichan School District today ending their strike that began May 29.

The members of IWA local 1-80 walked off the job when the school board turned down a two-year contract after objecting to severance pay provisions.

The new settlement calls for one-third of accrued sick pay to be paid after five years of service rather than an earlier demand for what the board had rejected as "a bonus for retiring employees."

The strike upset transportation for about 400 children the first day of the strike but only about a normal 10 per cent were absent later as parents rallied with car pools.

However, the nine schools affected were described as "filthy" by an angry group of parents at a board meeting Tuesday night and were expected to be closed within a week if the strike wasn't settled.

Independent To Make Bid

DUNCAN — Kenneth Hasanen, 39, Wednesday announced his intention to run as in independent candidate for Cowichan-Malahat riding in the next provincial election.

Returning officer Dick Eldred said it would be the first time in 20 years that an independent has attempted to take the riding now held by retiring NDPer Robert Strachan.

Plane Crash Kills Alberni Men

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — Two men were killed Wednesday night when a light plane crashed shortly after takeoff near this Central Vancouver Island city.

Killed where the aircraft's owner and pilot, Port Alberni contractor Kurt Kostanzer, 31, and passenger Peter Slova, 39, also of Port Alberni.

Witnesses said the plane's single engine seemed to be functioning normally when the plane "went straight in."

The two men had taken off from here about 15 minutes before the crash. They were believed to have been taking a short pleasure cruise.

Department of Transport officials from Vancouver visited the crash site Wednesday night. Their findings were not released.

VANCOUVER — Amar Singh and Darshan Singh Amar, both of Port Alberni, Wednesday won an appeal against a County Court conviction for conspiring with each other to unlawfully get three East Indians into Canada. The Appeal Court ruled that Darshan's wife should not have been called to give evidence and that without her evidence the conviction was unsupported.

Saanich Gets Greenbelt Aid Plan Backing

The Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities Wednesday adopted a Saanich resolution calling for federal aid to preserve urban area greenbelts.

Meeting in Ottawa mayors from across Canada firmly endorsed the Saanich move which, if adopted by the government, would see agricultural land purchased via federal low-interest loans then leased back to farmers for continuing use.

Mayor Hugh Curtis, who introduced the resolution to the annual conference, said the main aim was to prevent urban growth from utilizing all available land.

A second Saanich resolution urging legislation to prevent the sale of soft drinks in non-returnable bottles was also endorsed by the convention.

Mayor Curtis, who already holds the title of vice-president of the Union of British Columbia Municipalities, was elected vice-president of the CFM Wednesday morning.

Before the Magistrate

James S. Haskell, 59, 1029 Pendergast, pleaded guilty Wednesday in central court to stealing 16 gallons of paint from the federal government's department of transport.

He was remanded in custody to June 12 for sentence.

Magistrate William Ostler said the value of the paint was small but because the accused was in a position of trust it was a grave offence.

Court was told Haskell had been employed as a warehouse foreman in the transport department for 9½ years.

Police said they searched his house and another he owned Tuesday and found the paint, worth $50. He admitted taking it over the past four years.

A 20-year-old boy and girl were each given probation after pleading guilty to the theft of articles from a deserted house.

Mavis Moran and Carl Wong, 3055 Shelbourne, were each ordered to post $250 six month good behaviour bonds.

Const. Ron Brown said the pair, in company with a juvenile, entered the house at 16 Montreal Street, May 14. Taken were 17 books, a piece of marble, a basket, two tapestries, a bookstand and a box.

Earlier last month, the pair appeared in court and pleaded guilty to breaking and entering and theft for the same incident. The magistrate, however refused their pleas because he found fault with the charge.

Miss Moran said they used to think the house was haunted and knew it had been deserted for some time. They just walked through a hole in the door, she said.

Robert W. Clarke, 26, of 1621 Old Island Highway, was placed on a $500 one-year good behaviour bond on a charge of mischief. He pleaded guilty earlier.

Court was told Clarke damaged a lot of furniture in the house of a former girl friend.

He told the magistrate he was jealous.

Owen Gillespie, 20, of 798 Lampson, was fined a total of $100 on two charges of attempting to contribute to juvenile delinquincy.

He had pleaded not guilty to supplying liquor to two boys under 18.

Wilfred Corbett, 881 Brock, was fined $300 for impaired driving.

A 15-year-old juvenile pleaded guilty to escaping from the juvenile detention home, and to theft of a car, of a tape recorder, camera, typewriter and two briefcases. The youth, who was earlier raised from juvenile court, was remanded for sentence to June 13.

Importance Of Whimsies Overlooked

TORONTO (CP) — Historians don't seem to realize the importance of a political leader's idiosyncrasies, says Dalton Camp, former Progressive Conservative national association president.

For example, he recalls that with former prime minister John Diefenbaker "the best time to get a decision out of him was early in the day, early in the week, somewhere in Saskatchewan."

"The worst time was late in the day, late in the week, in Rimouski."

Mr. Camp, speaking Wednesday to the Canadian Historical Association, was describing his forthcoming memoirs.

The man who led the revolt against party-leader Diefenbaker said the book will be "an unghosted version of the events of the past 20 years in Canadian politics" and it definitely won't be titled Sorry About That, Chief.

"Promise her anything, but lend her your crayon." Grant Fedun is in Grade I and after a year at school is well qualified to help Nancy Peach with her drawing. Nancy, one of hundreds of children who will be starting school in September, had her first taste of school Wednesday afternoon during an orientation program designed to familiarize the children with classroom routine.

Ballet Shatters Cultural Desert Image

HAMILTON (CP) — Marta Hidy, regarded one of the best violinists in Eastern Europe, fled her native Hungary 13 years ago for an uncertain future in Canada.

Marta, with her trombonist husband Anton Dvorak and their two children, crept across the Austrian border Jan. 1, 1957, with only her violin and two rucksacks.

"We left because we were desperate," the violinist said. "We had to find a peaceful world for our children."

Today, Marta is concert master with the Hamilton Philharmonic Orchestra and is on the music faculty at McMaster University.

The Hungarian musicians faced an uphill struggle when they first arrived in Canada. Immigration officials sent them to Winnipeg, a place they had believed was a cultural desert. But during their train journey to Manitoba they read about the Royal Winnipeg Ballet. "Then we knew it must have an orchestra too, so we were cheered," Marta said.

WORK WAS PROBLEM

But they had problems finding work. "Officials would ask 'And what do you do?'" the violinist said. When told they were musicians, employers would say "That's nice, but what do you do for a living?"

Marta was concert master with the CBC Winnipeg orchestra and she drew excellent reviews from guest appearances with other orchestras, some of them in the United States. She appeared at the Town Hall in New York City and Toronto's Massey Hall, but her musical career never reached the popularity it did in her native Hungary.

Last summer Marta returned to Hungary for the first time since the hasty departure.

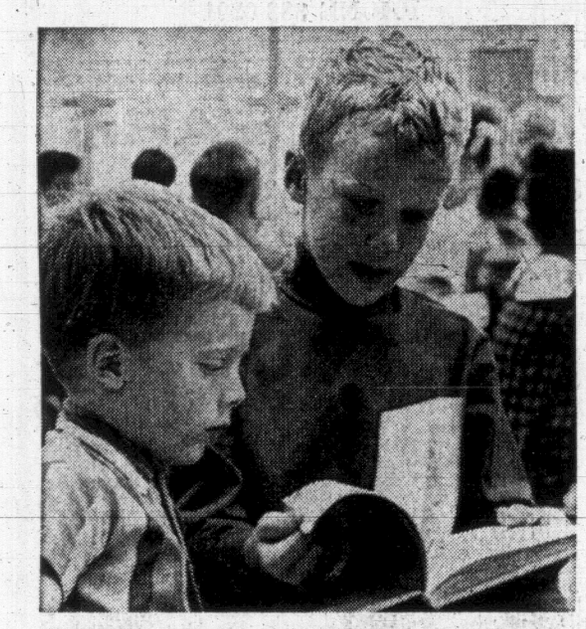

"That visit was marvellous — it recharged my cultural batteries," Marta said. "Concerts every evening, outdoor summer opera, streets full of people."

But she has no regrets about leaving Hungary's cultural opportunities. "I so honestly feel that Canada is the best country in the world. Canadians don't realize it. Immigrants do."

She thinks music in Winnipeg has grown quickly in 12 years. The Hamilton Philharmonic was "amateurish" when it began four years ago she said, but "now it's truly professional."

Now They've Been To the Big School

There's nothing frightening about school these days for youngsters who will be going into Grade 1 in September.

Painting masterpieces with the help of the older children, and listening to stories read by a nice teacher make it seem like fun for the children who visited View Royal School Wednesday afternoon for an hour to find out what goes on in class.

While the children were getting a preview of school life, their parents heard a brief talk by primary supervisor Mrs. Doreen Radcliffe on possible problems encountered when children start school.

But in the classroom visited by photographer Robin Clarke, problems should be at a minimum. With paints and crayons and stories about Bartholomew Beaver, it should be great fun.

Trying to decide what should go into a drawing they're working on are young Brian Stevens, right, and his Grade I helper, Roger Kobierski.

Billboard Blurb Offends Mathilda

By PENNY SAVER

It is all over town, the big billboard filled with the inevitably young and pretty woman looking enthusiastic about the can of paint in her hand. The message: If you had used (Blank) last time you painted, dear, you wouldn't be painting now. Mathilda and I found ourselves at the bottom of one of these billboards, staring upwards, our jaws stuck on the stubborness setting. "Decidely a nagger," declared Mathilda. "Can't you just hear her?" Her voice slid up into an insinuating whine as she repeated the words on the sign. If I had been a husband I would have struck her down on the spot. "Even the phrasing is nagging," my aunt continued in her normal tone. "Calling him 'dear,' even though she is insinuating that he is a foolish slob not to know about how great this paint is. She could say, 'Hey, why don't you try this paint? It's supposed to last longer.' But no, she has to be snide and self-righteous. The man who wrote that advertisement must hate women — but does he have to encourage them to perpetuate their folly?"

Cockeyed Coercion

After this conversation it was very difficult for me to approach my husband about trying the new car wax I had found. I was sure it was a good one since the same company makes floor waxes that have been favorites for years among us women. "Look what I found today," I commented in my sweetest, and I hoped most natural voice, holding up the can of wax. "Their floor wax is so good I thought I'd give this a try." And that is how I ended up washing and waxing the car.

Seriously, this wax is made for either boats or cars and according to the manufacturers will protect the paint all year round. It is very new and small samples were available at the store where I bought my tin, though I was so confident in the excellence of the company's products I didn't bother to pick one up. It is a one-step cleaner and waxer, though I always take the main part of the dirt off beforehand just in case. (Besides, by the time our car gets a wax job it has reached the critical stage.) The wax can be applied either in sun or in shade so one doesn't have to wait for a cloudy day. This wax is available in a 14-ounce tin of paste with applicator for $4.50 or in a pressurized 16-ounce can for $2.90.

Once a weaver I know of pulled out a skein of yarn she planned to make into drapes for her dining room and told me it was oat twist. The name was apt for it was a tweedy linen yarn that mixed a pale bone with a pale brownish beige—very like the colors one sees in oatmeal—so this combination has been oat twist for me ever since. I was very pleased the other day when I found some linen kitchen accessories in this oat twist shade. There are tea towels, aprons, toaster covers and pot holders. All but the tea towels combine the oat twist linen with a crisp gold colored cotton as an edging and in the case of the apron as the strings. The oat twist is used as a background for a still life with fruits in gold and orangey-brown shades. The apron is $2.49 while the pot holder and toaster cover are both $1.95.

The tea towel comes in the same fruit pattern but it is also available printed with quail or kitchen-type designs. Each towel is $1 and is made completely of the oat twist linen.

Also at $1 and made by the same company is an extra thirsty yet lint-free tea towel. The secret is that these towels are made like a terry bath towel with the loops to give extra moisture-absorbing surfaces. I don't know how they are prevented from giving off lint, but it may have something to do with the texture of the nap which is much thinner than a regular terry towel. These towels are white with a kitchen pattern printed in green.

If you would like to know where to find these items, please call 382-3131 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m.

No matter what shape your figure is in—you'll find this is a most slenderizing design. Shannon Rodgers created this for Jerry Silverman in a silk plaid. The collar is set off with a grosgrain bow. The inset belt is cut on the bias. The flared skirt is shirred in at the waist, sporting a deep centre front pleat and pockets. It is zipped up the back. Make it in medium-weight cotton, silk linen, shantung, checks and plaids, surah. 60659 is cut in Misses' sizes 8-16. Size 12 requires approximately 3½ yards of 39" fabric.

To order Pattern 60659, state size, include name and address. Send $1.50 plus 25c first-class postage and handling. Send orders for books and patterns to Pattern Department, Victoria Daily Times. Make all cheques and money orders payable to the Times. This pre-cut, pre-perforated Spadea Designer Pattern comes in ready-to-wear sizes that produce a better fit and are easier to make. DEAR ABBY . . .

Joy of Giving Not Everything

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Every time my wife and I go to visit a friend or relative, my wife thinks she has to bring a little gift for the children. I think it's a nice idea when the children are appreciative, but I put my foot down when it comes to a certain family.

My wife's sister married very well and she has three spoiled, selfish children, under ten years of age. No matter what we bring them (and my wife always spends a little more on them just to make a good impression) it is received with, "Oh, is that all?" Or, "I have one just like it."

I told my wife that from now on, we'll bring those children nothing. She says she agrees, they don't deserve anything, but if she came empty-handed her sister would look at her funny. What would you do?—Tillie's Husband.

DEAR HUSBAND: I would let my sister look at me any way she wished, and would discontinue bringing gifts to ungrateful children.

DEAR ABBY: What does a wife, who really loves her husband, do when he asks for permission to spend one night with his old girl friend to find out if he has really gotten over her or not?

Boyd and I have been married two years and have a small baby and I want this marriage to last. I am 23 and Boyd is 24.

I knew Boyd went steady with a girl all through high school, but I assumed that after we were married he would forget about her. Now he tells me that she had an unhappy marriage and is back in town again.

Abby, I have my pride, I don't want Boyd wondering whether he still cares for his "first love," I will say this for him, at least he was honest with me. He could have seen this girl again without telling me and I would never have known.

What do you advise?—Heartaches.

DEAR HEARTACHES: Don't hang any medals on Boyd for his "honesty." It's a manoeuvre. You are married to an immature 24-year-old who is looking for "mother's approval" to be a naughty boy. Let him know that you are not his mother, you're the wife he took when he promised to forsake all others, and that's what you expect him to do.

DEAR ABBY: I am going with a guy I'll call Willie. I'm 19 and Willie is 22. I enjoy talking about things like what kind of a house we are going to live in, how many children we will have, and things like that. I suppose talk like this is sort of premature because we aren't officially engaged yet.

To be perfectly honest, I guess I do most of the talking because Willie is the quiet type. It it wrong to talk like that or not?—Likes Willie.

DEAR LIKES: It's not "wrong"—but it's not very smart. I am reminded of an old recipe for rabbit stew. First catch the rabbit.

Confidential to "Tony in Providence": If you want to give her money, that's your business. But if she asks you for it, face it, friend, that could be her business.

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069, and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069, for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

More Freedom for Future Babies

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) — Lucky, the new crop of parents. Merchandisers catering to them will be giving birth also — to new products, new ideas for the young parents so that bringing up baby will be a far cry from what it has been.

Sacrifice on the part of parents will be out. Uninhibited babyhood and parental permissiveness will be in.

A look at the new business of babies comes from Dr. Ernest Dichter, head of the institute for motivational research, Croton-on-Hudson, N.Y.

"Our studies of young adults indicate that parenthood will indeed be conducted in new ways, based on changed attitudes of this group," says the institute, taking note of the baby market that'll be provided from more than two million marriages annually.

"Young parents will want good things for their children —but will be less sacrificial in attitude than past generations," Dichter predicts.

"The new mother will be less willing to have her time and money consumed in caring for children. She'll . . . have less anxiety about perfection in following the rules of baby care to the letter."

And the young women brought up on convenient products of all kinds will be willing to accept work-saving baby care items — not only disposable diapers, but also sheets, curtains, baby food in self-heating cans, tables with indentations for food to replace plates, even edible plates, more "finger foods," even gourmet foods adapted for children at earlier ages.

Baby clothing should become more convenient for baby and mother in the matter of disposables other than diapers — new closing methods to eliminate laces, buttons, hooks and more one-piece garments which take the place of many little ones, especially for outdoor wear.

New technology and services may solve the problem of cost and availability of babysitters. Apartment houses may provide group sitters. Or electronic "baby-watchers" may be developed.

More fun is in store for child and parent — like having homes with "yes" rooms where mother and baby can romp at will, even drawing on the walls without the usual, "no, no."

Crib or playpen — "actually cages" — may give way to whole, safe baby rooms. Furniture will be adapted for the tiny ones, not only in scale but in provisions for games and good times — chairs to hide in, tables with animal legs, carpets to bounce on or with game boards in their designs.

Parents will want their babies to have more fun, Dichter continues, they'll cater to making baby creative, with toys that rely not so much on teaching a specific skill like answering the telephone, but something called "operational training, decision-making, planning, social communication."

Mary Ann Is Mother Hen To Sisters and Brother

LACOMBE, Alta. (CP) — Twenty-year-old Mary Ann Galarneau has committed herself to raising her six orphaned sisters and brother until the last child is launched on a suitable career.

Last Nov. 30 their parents set out on their first holiday in four years, It ended near Stettler, Alta., where they were killed in a car accident.

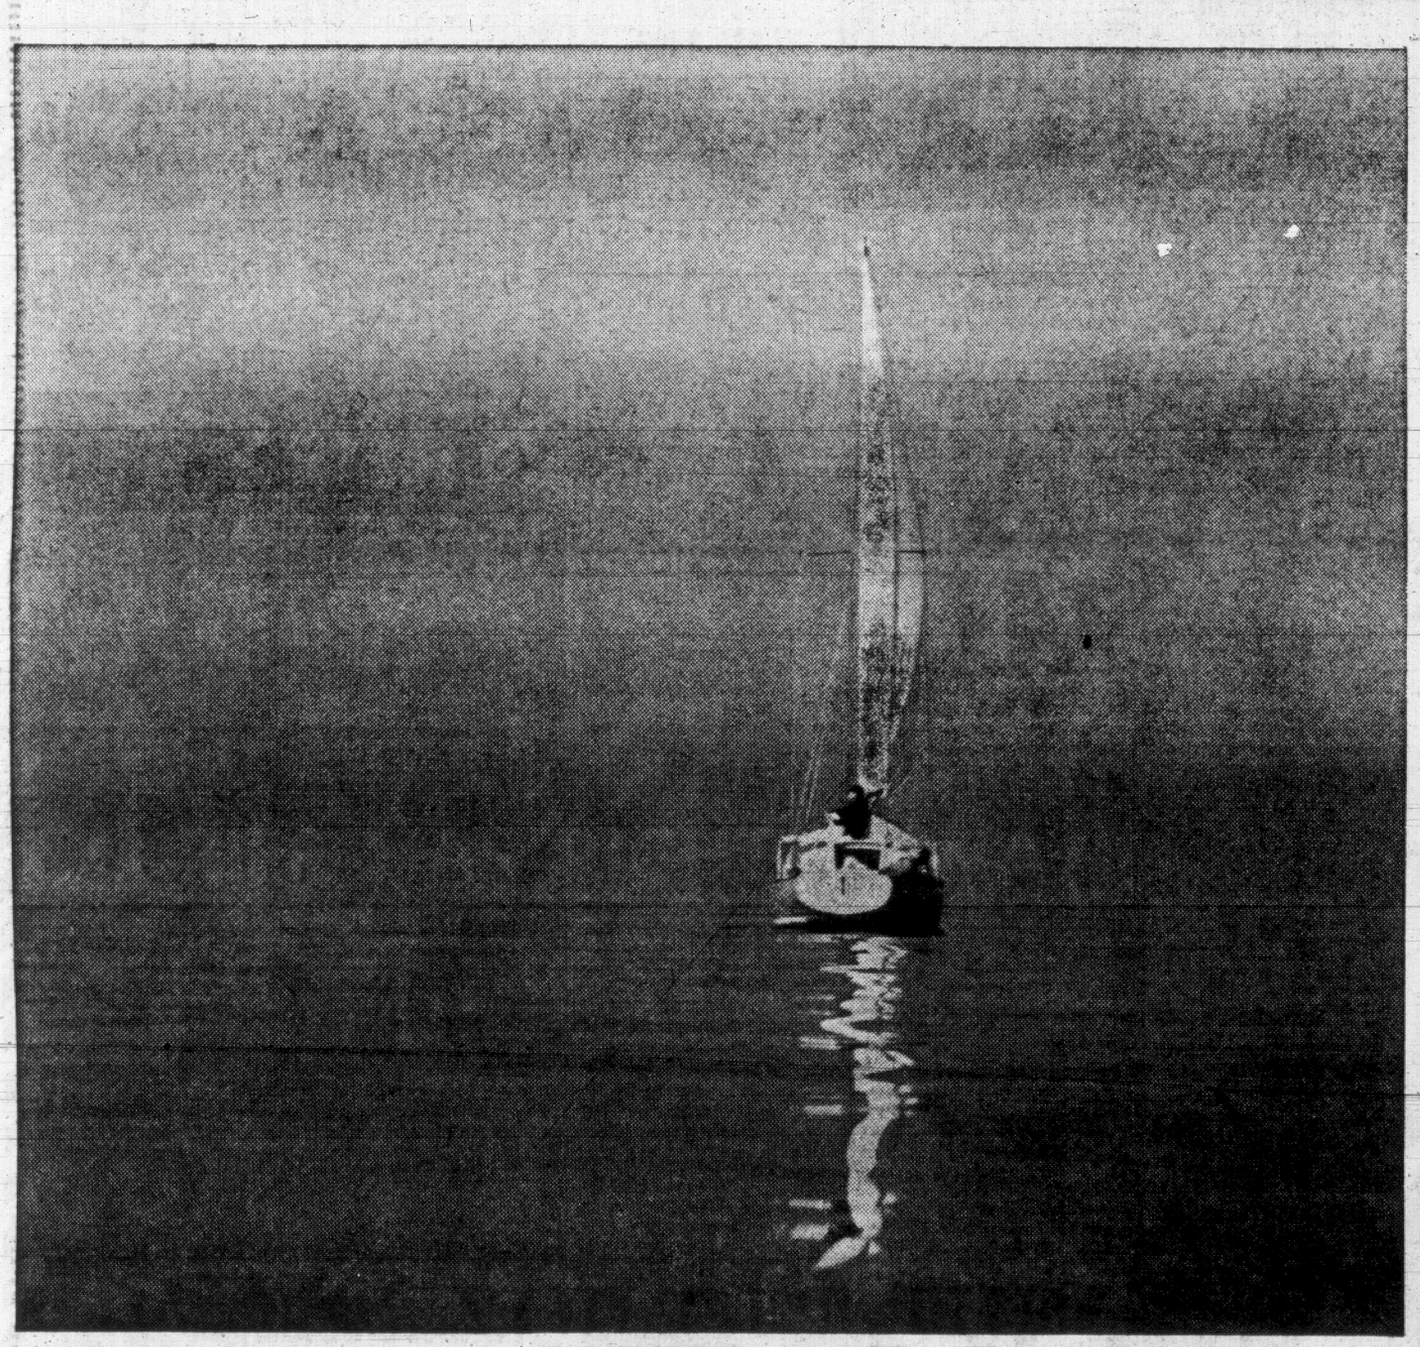

Mary Ann was thrust into the position of head of the household. The young family resolved to whip the problems together.

They were faced with an estate that had no assigned heirs. Mr. Galarneau's will named his wife as the beneficiary—and she had no will. In such cases the Alberta Public Trustee becomes the executor, and assigns an allowance.

Mary Ann pores over newspapers for household bargains, especially in food prices. She is thankful her mother taught her and the oldest girls, Jeanette, 18; Kathleen, 17, and Patsy, 14, to cook and to manage their home.

Even eight-year-old Janice has household tasks and deadlines. Failure to meet the deadlines results in an embarrassing explanatory session before the family council that includes Alice, 10, and the only boy among six sisters, 13-year-old Frankie.

With new CAREFREE Tampons, you can go anywhere and stay out longer. Read below and find out how it's now possible.

Johnson & Johnson introduces CAREFREE* Tampons – a new concept in sanitary protection.

CAREFREE is an entirely new kind of tampon—much smaller than any tampon ever made, yet amazingly, it protects up to 3 hours longer.

Johnson & Johnson has developed CAREFREE, the most absorbent, the most reliable tampon ever made. CAREFREE is, in fact, safe for up to 3 hours longer than any other tampon.

Another remarkable feature of the CAREFREE Tampon is that it is truly disposable. No more rigid cardboard tube to get rid of. CAREFREE comes without an applicator because it doesn't need one. There's just a neat, compact tampon in a cellophane wrapper.

What are other women doing about sanitary protection?

According to research studies conducted in Canada, the use of tampons is growing rapidly. Their use is widely accepted, particularly among the younger, more sophisticated women. In this group, the majority of women use tampons.

Most women think that tampons are indeed a good idea. But they worry about the reliability of present products, particularly when it comes to using them during the entire period. (Some women are so concerned that they use both tampons and napkins.) But such precautions are completely unnecessary with new CAREFREE Tampons.

Higher absorbency

CAREFREE Tampons' greater absorbency results from a unique quality. While the traditional tampon expands lengthwise, the CAREFREE Tampon expands, logically enough, in width—as the flow requires. This gentle expansion causes the tampon to mould itself to the body contours so it's accident-proof.

Exhaustive clinical tests and actual use among 3,720 women have proven that CAREFREE Tampons can be worn, with complete assurance, even during days when the flow is heaviest.

New CAREFREE Tampons are truly disposable

The cumbersome applicator that you get with ordinary tampons is a thing of the past. CAREFREE doesn't have an applicator because it doesn't need one. It is compact, smooth and firm enough to be inserted easily without one. And this makes CAREFREE a truly disposable tampon.

CAREFREE is also the smallest tampon there is—so small you can hide one in the palm of your hand. So small you can even put a dozen of them in your most fashionable bag and still have room for all that you usually carry. (A whole box of CAREFREE Tampons takes up no more room than a small pack of cigarettes.)

Once they've tried CAREFREE Tampons women are quick to recognize their many great advantages. They're the only significant improvement in sanitary protection in years.

Once-Poor Libya Now Wretchedly Rich

By ALLAN JACKS

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Libya had problems when it was poor, and it has problems now that it's rich.

For one thing, the country fears that things might change if another Middle East war breaks out. For another, its strong king is in his 80th year, and no one is certain how things will be after he goes.

Just 10 years ago this vast desert kingdom was gripped in a vise of backwardness and poverty. Now it is a blooming, increasingly prosperous country, rocketing forward on a single fuel: Oil.

Perhaps no other state in history has experienced such meteoric change and development. In a decade Libya has gone from the camel to the jet airplane, a meagre export of olive oil with a river of petroleum and a rudimentary agricultural existence with rapidly modernizing industrial life.

Prospectors first discovered oil under the Sahara's sands in 1957, and two years later a United States oil company, Esso, brought in the first well.

Today, 3,000,000 barrels leave the country every day, providing the Libyan government with about $1,000,000,000 annually in revenue. That is approximately $650 for each of the country's 1,500,000 people. More than 40 U.S. and European oil companies are involved, along with scores of drilling and pipeline concerns, tankers and storage facilities.

Natural gas began to go to Europe this year in specially-built ships and containers. The government already is earning $10,000,000 annually from this—a rate expected to skyrocket in coming years.

GNP Jumps

The country's gross national product has jumped from a per capita figure of $40 to well above $1,000, an increase unmatched anywhere.

The statistics are staggering even to those who have watched all this at first hand, but the problems that have come with success are almost equally staggering.

The immediate No. 1 problem is an almost complete lack of people with the education and training to handle the complexities of a modern industrial community. The result is a multilingual work force recruited from all corners of the industrial world—oil men from Texas, bank managers and communications experts from Britain, builders from Poland, doctors from Yugoslavia, nurses from Nationalist China, clerical workers and airline stewardesses from Lebanon, pilots from France, teachers and editors from Egypt, mechanics and machine operators from Italy, salesmen from everywhere.

Libyans keep a tight hold on the executive jobs, even though often flanked by European or U.S. advisers. And younger Libyans, educated in the oil era at home and abroad, are making sure progress up the ladder.

Girls Contrast

A few Libyan girls hold key secretarial jobs along with Greeks, Palestinians and a small army of mini-skirted English girls. The latter present a startling sight on the streets of Tripoli where many women, young and old, still wear the traditional white barracan, covering themselves completely except for eyes and feet.

Libyan nurses, mechanics, clerks and a few managers are also joining the work force.

The boom has sparked inflation. It is particularly evident in Tripoli and Benghazi, which have more than a third of the country's population. Prices have been rising constantly.

Tripoli's man-made harbor, bathed in a hot May sun, gives the impression of a vast military landing. New docks and warehouses are jammed with trucks, tractors, crates and bales unloaded from a stream of arriving freighters. Other ships lie at anchor waiting for dock or lighter space.

Men and facilities can barely cope with the flood of equipment and supplies. New housing, hospitals and schools are rising in cities and villages alike.

The country is a kaleidoscope of contrasts—the new, the old and the ancient.

Arab merchants sell hand-woven rugs and gold trinkets from stalls in the old bazaars of Tripoli and Benghazi. Their mountains of merchandise also include radios from West Germany and Japan, electric mixers, and colorful machine-made textiles, mostly imported.

Muezzins Use Tapes

Muezzins call the faithful to prayer five times a day—by recorded tapes broadcast from modern minarets.

Cars speed over modern highways, most built in the Italian colonial days, past camel carts and heavily laden donkeys.

Television aerials jut from small white village houses and modern city apartments to receive government programs initiated this year. Jet and turbo-prop planes, operated by the Kingdom of Libya Airlines, connect Libya with Europe and the country's cities with its remote desert oases.

Oil has produced most of these developments, but the country has other assets too —archeological treasures in limitless numbers and some agriculture.

Leptis Magnus, Sabratha and other ancient cities, plus the sea and the oasis-dotted desert can make Libya a tourist's goal. But prices are high and hotel rooms scarce. New hotels are going up. So are prices, pressed by spreading prosperity.

Libya's economic progress has been to a considerable extent matched politically. Relative stability has come to the country in only 18 years of independence.

After centuries under the domination of the Ottoman Turkish Empire, and three decades under Italian rule, Libya was established as a constitutional monarchy under King Idris I. He is a direct descendant of the Prophet Mohammed and grandson of the founder of the Senussi movement, active for nearly a century in promoting Libyan independence.

The Senussis sought a return to traditional Arab life and to restore Orthodox Islam —to return to the true teachings of Islam as practised by Mohammed. This remains a cornerstone of Idris's governments.

King is Firm

The king, universally respected, maintains firm control through his constitutional power to appoint and relieve prime ministers.

Late last year he ousted Abdel Hamid al-Bakoush, an energetic Tripoli lawyer of 36. In his place the king appointed Wanis el Quaddafi, 45, a tribal leader who held a number of ministerial posts previously.

No reasons were given. But many Libyans agree that Bakoush had antagonized conservative elements with too rapid a drive toward change and modernization.

After Idris what will happen?

Childless, King Idris has designated a nephew, 35-year-old Hassan el-Rida, as crown prince and successor. He has had no opportunity to date to display either political or executive talents.

"There will be no problems at first," says a source with government contacts. "But inevitably the new moneyed class will make a bid for political power. And it is impossible to predict where this will lead."

Spend Freely

The moneyed class is a by-product of prosperity. It includes contractors providing supplies and services to the oil industry, agents for foreign firms, importers, middlemen and operators. It also includes owners of once worthless desert which has become thriving suburbs or sites for hotels, apartments and office buildings.

These people spend freely, and not always wisely. They fly to London, Rome, Beirut or Cairo.

Until now they have been kept away from government and have little political influence. King Idris has formed his governments to a great extent with traditionalists and with professional men—engineers, educationists, lawyers —many educated abroad.

Of far greater concern, to high-placed Libyans and Western diplomats alike, is the possible effect of another Middle East upheaval. A new Arab-Israeli war, they fear, could push Libya to an abrupt reversal of present policies.

When the June, 1967, war erupted so did Libya. Mobs wrecked a U.S. Information Service library and stoned the British embassy. The government ordered all oil production halted. Planes were grounded at the big Wheelus base, a U.S. Air Force training station outside Tripoli.

Oil began flowing again and Wheelus planes flew about a month later. The next emotional explosion could be far worse.

Libya has never been directly involved in the Arab-Israeli conflict but it is as deeply involved emotionally as any other Arab country.

The government helps support Egypt at the rate of $70,000,000 annually and gives Jordan $28,000,000 a year.

BONG HERE TO STAY

HONG KONG SETS PACE

Oriental Know-How Aids City Home Planning

By JIM HUME

Half a century ago he couldn't get a job in Victoria . . .

. . . unless he'd settled for selling vegetables, working on the railroad or slinging chop-suey in a dowdy back street restaurant.

Daniel Bong is Chinese, a 30-year-old native of Hong Kong who came to Canada two years ago.

Today, with a degree in architecture from the University of Hong Kong he's one of the most treasured members of the Victoria city hall planning staff.

Unassuming and very shy, "Danny"—fellow workers gave him that western abbrieviation of his name the day he started work—came to the city to work for John Wade a month after landing in Edmonton from the Orient.

"I arrived there in April," says the soft-spoken young man. "It was still pretty cold up there so I came back to the coast to go to work for Mr. Wade."

The son of a Hong Kong baker, "Danny" graduated from UHK in 1965 and spent two years with a housing development authority in that city before striking out "to see the world and meet new challenges" in 1967.

NOT GOING BACK

He likes what he has seen over here and has already made the quiet but firm decision that "I don't think I'll ever go back there to practise."

But he has a few reservations.

"Architecturally, people are very conservative over here," he says with a shy but ready smile. "There are one or two newer and quite contemporary buildings in the city, but generally, design change is quite slow in coming compared to Hong Kong."

Having said that, he explains that his home city literally stands at the crossroads where east and west meet and live together.

"Hong Kong is in a very peculiar situation," he says. "It really is the melting pot where east and west meet. It may not be the biggest city in the world, but I think it has the biggest ideas and some of the best from both worlds.

"That is why Hong Kong has prospered so much. In the city you will see the most advanced techniques used. They are not fearful of new techniques and new developments, two things that are essential if a city is to prosper."

Daniel Bong is far too polite and courteous to criticize his adopted country. But he leaves you with the feeling that he is one inscrutable oriental anxious to get on with the job of planning for the future with a minimum of delay.

He finds Canada's three levels of government a little bewildering although again he's too polite to be critical.

RED TAPE HERE

"In Hong Kong there was only one level of government so things got done a little quicker," is as far as he'll go. He leaves unsaid the fact that the first project he worked on for the city was the Rose-Blanshard low-rental housing area, a project which repeatedly bogged down in governmental red tape.

It was Daniel Bong who worked out the design minimums eventually accepted by provincial and federal authorites when the call for design proposals was made.

His last job in the Orient was also on a low-rental housing development—but with a difference.

Danny doesn't say so, but at times he must have felt the Rose-Blanshard's 184 housing units was some kind of kindergarten game.

The Hong Kong project was for 50,000 people jammed into a space ratio of 2,000 people per acre and with a floor space ratio of 35 square feet per person.

In the Rose-Blanshard the space ratio is around 170 square feet per person and roughly 80 people to the acre.

With a brother in Victoria (he's an engineer with the provincial government) and a brother (he graduates as a medical doctor next year) and sister in Hong Kong the young Chinese architect just isn't the type to gose eking praise.

But he gets it, anyway.

Says his boss, chief planner Geoff Greenhalgh: "Danny is a real find. In the short time he's been with us he has made a tremendous contribution. He still leaves me a little surprised by the speed he grasps a situtions and converts a request into a visible proposal."

Assistant to the city manager, Bill Hooson voices similar plaudits.

Hooson took Danny along with him recently for a three-day visit to Calgary for discussions on the future of Canada's Chinatowns.

"I got to know him pretty well during those three days," Hooson says. "He never ceased to amaze me. His ability to take in a complicated report and boil it down, seemingly within minutes, to something readable and easy to understand is really quite fantastic.

New Arts Centre Said 'One of Best'

NEW YORK (CP) — Clive Barnes, dance and drama critic of the New York Times, says the new National Arts Centre in Ottawa is "one of the best theatre buildings in North America."

Barnes, who travelled to Ottawa for the centre's opening, praises the building's exterior, but has reservations about the decorations inside and the seating arrangements.

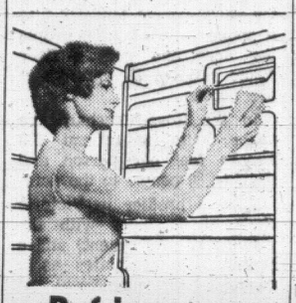

He also says that the music of a new ballet presented at the centre's opening, written by Iannis Zenakis "is one of the major ballet scores of the century."

Barnes says people should "never even dream" of building an arts centre because "it will either cost too much, or look too different." But although those who build such centres the "thanks of posterity" may encounter criticsim, Barnes says be their reward.

Referring to the Ottawa building, Barnes says that "from the outside and in general tratment it is . . . one of the best theatre buildings in North America . . ."

"It's outside is strong and uncompromising, and yet grows out of its site, looking like a modern domestic-style castle beside a canal."

Although praising Zenakis' music for the ballet, entitled Kraanerg, as "a wonderful piece of music, enthralling, and one that grips the mind and the heart," Barnes says the choreography by Roland Petit was "totally inadequate to the music."

Ottawa Playgoers Try Toys

By ELINOR READING

OTTAWA (CP) — Playgoers at the National Arts Centre Wednesday night had their first chance to help play with the toys in the experimental studio theatre.

Party Day, by Toronto's Jack Winter, had been billed as a "multimedia spectacle" and kept in tight secrecy before its premiere Wednesday. It turned out to be a discussion of what is art, truth and propaganda in the light of the 1936 Berlin Olympics and the great Nazi party rallies from 1933 to 1939.

Ticket-holders found small radio receivers on the seats and at intervals had a choice between listening to the actors or to the taped speeches on the receivers. White curtains dropped down to serve as screens for projected slides and films and once a section of the floor slowly sank 12 feet, carrying 10 of the audience with it.

The studio is built to encourage just such uses. It might hold 300 packed in, but each director arranges his own seating, and Party Day is set up for about 200 spectators.

AUDIENCE CAUGHT UP?

If the audience was closely involved in the machinery of the play, they did not appear caught up in any emotion about it.

The program called the play "a theatre of choice" and spectators looking for a moral could choose. There was the concluding statement by Nazi propaganda minister Joseph Goebbels, praising the future of the arts centre in the manner of a Canadian official.

There was a Nazi radio broadcaster, acquitted of war crimes at the Nuernberg trials, saying complacently: "Communications is the safest weapon." And there was Pontius Pilate's question that ended the first act: "What is truth?"

Party Day continues a four-day run tonight with all tickets sold out except for Saturday's matinee. Performances of the National Ballet in the 2,300-seat opera house also are sold out, but a handful of tickets still remained just before curtain time Wednesday for the French-language play Lysistrata in the 800-seat theatre.

The fourth and last of the centre's performing areas, the small salon, opens tonight with a chamber music concert by the Manitoba Consort.

Farmers Hope For Early Rain

EDMONTON (CP) — Prairie farmers cursed the rain last year because it left them with millions of bushels of damp, unmarketable grain in storage bins.

This year, so that their newly-seeded crops may get off to a good start, they are praying for rain.

With seeding nearly completed in most of the Prairies there is little more farmers can do but sit and wait. Most are optimistic despite the wet summer of 1968.

John Church, who farms 640 acres at Balzac, just north of Calgary, is typical.

"There is no problem to date . . . but only time will tell," he says. "It would be nice to have a little more rain."

The farmers need rain now when the crops are new to the ground and need a healthy start.

"I looks real good," says Barry Farr, who runs a large grain farm with his father at Francis, about 40 miles southeast of Regina. "If the rain comes at the right time and the frost stays away. . . ."

MILLIONS SOAKED

Last summer's legacy of damp grain—there were about 80,000,000 bushels left in late April—is having an effect on this year's wheat crop.

Wheat acreage in all three Prairie provinces is down from last year. Alberta is seeding 5,600,000 acres, down 900,000 from 1968; Saskatchewan 17,100,000, down 1,900,000; and Manitoba 2,750,000, down 750,000.

Estimated acreages in other grains are up this year, a possible indication of a trend toward diversification. Only oats in Manitoba are down.

Premier Ross Thatcher of Saskatchewan has long been a disciple of diversification and C. C. Morrow of the Saskatchewan agriculture department says such a trend is taking place.

"There is a definite trend toward more livestock in the province," says Mr. Morrow, chief of the animal industry division of the production and marketing branch. "They realize they're too vulnerable with a one-crop economy."

Alberta farmers have been avoiding the single-crop system for a number of years. In past bad years, Alberta has been less affected by poor crop and marketing conditions.

The Alberta Wheat Pool says subsoil moisture levels are good but more topsoil moisture is needed in the south.

"Moisture reserves are very good indeed," says J. E. Dehm, acting deputy agriculture minister in Saskatchewan. "And at this time of year, that's about all we can forecast."

Throughout Manitoba, subsoil reserves are described as adequate. As in the two other provinces, more rain is needed to allow even germination.

FORMER Ghana Supreme Court Judge Maurice Charles this week was appointed to Toronto's "liquor court" and became the first Negro judge ever appointed to the bench in Ontario.

Remodelling To Provide More Rooms

A plan which provides more housing without new building and at the same time upgrades rundown real estate was outlined to the Victoria Labour Council Wednesday night.

Ashley McConnell, delegate from the B.C. Hydro bus drivers' union, said the program is under way in Seattle but added later it might be even more applicable in Greater Victoria where there is a high proportion of elderly people, many of them living one or two to a house.

HOME GARDEN

Slopes Need Planning

By HILDA BEASTALL

Gardens sloping upwards from the normal viewing point are a peculiar problem needing careful planning if they are to give pleasure to their owners.

First there is the front garden viewed both from street level and from the house.

This is the most difficult to furnish with plants for the effect is seen from below and above. Widely spreading junipers, azaleas and broadleaved evergreens are likely to be the best choices, with heathers or something similar for color and perhaps a small deciduous tree or two to break the level.

Sargent's-crab (Malus sargentii) rarely goes much above six feet in such a position, having uses in many difficult garden spots.

To be avoided are dense, high and broad evergreens right against the foundation of the house on top of a slope, about delicately patterned flowering shrubs like weigelas, mockoranges, the better spiraeas, losing their leaves in winter, will be good.

A back garden sloping upwards from the house could be experimented with by growing a dozen of ten different heights in annuals, and planting them (12 of a kind in a group) at various levels as though each group were a permanent plant.

During summer, effects of heights could be noted. The tallest would be found most effective at the foot of the slope, with the shortest half way up, and medium height nearer the top.

At least, an owner could make some decisions from the experiment.

An upward sloping garden is a wonderful spot for growing climbing plants—Hydrangea petiolaris, rampant clematises and, with some shade, the unusual Actinidia chinensis with red hairy young leaves.

ASK ANDY

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a World Book Atlas.

Andy sends a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Kathy Hall, age 11, of Inola, Oklahoma, for her question:

Is salt present in the human body?

If you have ever cried your heart out, the teary liquid may run into your mouth and you know that it has a salty taste. A drop of blood also has a salty flavor and so does a drop of perspiration. These and other body fluids depend on dissolved salt to do their work and we supply it by eating pinches of salt on our food.

By salt, we usually mean ordinary table salt known to chemists as sodium chloride. The miraculous human body is composed of an assortment of simple chemicals and chemical compounds. About 99 per cent of it is composed of 29 essential elements such as oxygen and carbon. Less than 1 per cent is made from about seven elements present in smaller quantities. This list includes sodium and chlorine. Each contributes about 0.15 of the body's total chemical storehouse.

Sodium and chlorine are rather unpleasant elements by themselves. But when combined to form sodium chloride, they are acceptable to the body. Every day we give it 10 to 30 grams of this table salt along with our food. The body's internal chemical activities separate some of these salt molecules so that the sodium and chlorine can perform different duties. Both these chemicals are dissolved in body fluids.

The blood cells are carried in a stream of liquid plasma. This liquid must contain a delicate balance of dissolved chemicals to keep the blood cells from either bursting or shrivelling. Most of the positive ions in blood plasma are sodium ions taken from salt. More sodium is needed in the soothing chemical fluids that surround the busy cells. This dissolved sodium assists the chemical activities of metabolism. It is needed by the sensitive nerve endings and it also plays a role in maintaining balanced pressure around the blood vessels.

Discards Salt

The chlorine in table salt also finds its way to the body fluids that surround the cells. There it aids the vital processes of metabolism and plays several roles similar to those of sodium. Here the two chemicals work together and depend upon each other. Sodium, however, does not enter the living cells but chlorine does. There it performs a valuable role in maintaining the cell's proper balance of water and pressure. Chlorine also has special duties within the digestive system. For one thing, it is needed to build the essential digestive juice called hydrochloric acid.

As the salt performs its vital chemical activities within the body, its atoms and molecules go through many changes. Hormones and other factors direct these activities and control the delicate balance of salt within the body. Every day, about 90 per cent of the salt in the body is discarded in tears, perspiration and liquid wastes through the kidneys. And since this chemical is so vital to the chemical processes of life, every day this quota must be replaced with sprinklings of more table salt on our food.

When the quota of salt inside the body is unbalanced, all sorts of unpleasant things occur. A person gets a headache and feels weak. There may be muscle cramps and nausea and in extreme cases the patient collapses. As a rule, a healthy body gets rid of too much salt.

Andy sends a World Book Globe to Michael Louis Cook, age 8, of Rochester, New York, for his question:

How was the Pacific Ocean really formed?

The waters of the Pacific Ocean fill a huge basin as big as the full moon. In fact, for a long time many experts thought that the moon really was made from the material that came from this hole in the earth's crust. But this idea has gone way, way out of style. Up-to-date scientists are pretty sure that the Pacific Ocean was not formed when a chunk of the earth was torn loose and departed to become the moon.

However, they are not certain what did cause the great ocean basin. To solve this problem, they need to know a great deal more about the earth and its outer crust. This rocky layer of the globe has been changing through four billion years. We know a lot about how its mountains were formed and about many other events. Scientists have a lot of evidence that suggest that the continents have gradually separated and wandered around the globe. If this is true, it would certainly change the seas and their basins. But at present, nobody is sure how the great Pacific Ocean was formed.

Yoga May Hold Survival Clue

NEW DELHI (Reuters) — Indian scientists have found that some yogis can withstand cold, stop their heart sounds or alter their bodily metabolism through transcendental meditation.

One yogi was able to relax so completely that his consumption of oxygen was drastically reduced—something which could prove vital for a desperate astronaut running out of air.

The research being carried out at the Institute of Medical Sciences could also have considerable significance for the survival of miners trapped underground or sailors facing the risk of death by exposure on icy seas.

Another yogi, after a long sojourn meditating half-naked in the snows of the Himalayas, became so impervious to cold that he could place his hand in water only seven degrees fahrenheit above freezing and keep it there for 25 minutes.

A third yogi could break out into a sweat on any part of his body by meditating about one area which was warm.

The unusual research began 12 years ago when two scientists, Dr. M. A. Wenger of the University of California in Los Angeles, and Dr. B. K. Bagchi from Ann Arbor, Mich., came to India to study the effects of yoga.

Their studies encouraged Indian scientists to pursue the subject and the team now is headed by Dr. B. K. Annand and Dr. Gulzar China.

Their subjects have included 15 disciples of the Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, who achieved fame as the guru of the Beatles, and a British teacher who became a Hindu holy man.

The researchers have not been able to throw any light on that ancient phenomenon, the Indian rope trick.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Angry U.S. Killed Reciprocal Trading

By BOB BOWMAN

It was mentioned in a recent story that the end of the U.S. Civil War was also the end of a reciprocal trade deal that brought prosperity to Canada and the Maritimes. The victorious northern states were angry because Britain had allowed the Confederates to obtain an armed ship that was used as a raider. They were also angry because Canada had been a base for Confederate spies and saboteurs during the war. So they refused to renew the trade deal.

Bowman

It had been signed in Washington on June 5, 1854, by Lord Elgin for Canada and Secretary of State Marcy for the U.S. and came into effect in May 1855 for 10 years. The Americans were allowed to fish within the three mile limit of the Atlantic coast, and have free use of the St. Lawrence river and canals in Canada.

Canada, the Maritimes, and Newfoundland were allowed to export a great variety of products to the U.S.A. duty free. They included grain, flour, fish, lumber, tar, turpentine, and many others. Canada and the Maritimes began to prosper quickly.

However, the trade deal was not easy to arrange. In the first place it was strongly opposed in the Maritimes who were unwilling to give the Americans such generous fishing rights. They agreed to support Lord Elgin's proposals only after a number of politicians and influential people had been bribed. Some details are given in W. G. Hardy's excellent book From Sea Unto Sea.

Then Lord Elgin had to sell the Americans through the strength of his own personality. As Professor Hardy says in his book "Lord Elgin was a master of racy anecdote and brilliant repartee." He entertained one group of senators opposed to the treaty until two in the morning, and finally got their agreement.

Canada has not been able to get as good a deal from the U.S. since although Prime Minister Laurier was working out a trade treaty when he was defeated in 1911.

Canada-Taiwan Ties Grow More Stretched

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — Each time External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp talks about exchanging diplomats with Peking, it appears to widen the gulf between the Canadian government and the Chinese Nationalist government of Chiang Kai-shek.

It is not that Mr. Sharp's recent statements have contained any new major disclosures, but in the eyes of some Chinese diplomats there are steadily-growing indications that Canada's relations with the Taiwan-based Nationalist government are of little importance in the current Canada-Peking talks.

When Mr. Sharp indicated Thursday that Canada is prepared to break off relations with Taiwan in the process of recognizing the Peking government, the Nationalist Chinese ambassador in Ottawa said this brings Canada-Taiwan relations to a "crisis."

Mr. Sharp had already said in the Commons that an exchange of diplomatic recognition between Canada and Peking would mean that Canada-Taiwan ties would "of course be affected."

While this was generally interpreted as meaning diplomatic ties would be broken, it none the less left some doubt about whether Canada would in fact go this far.

STATEMENT STRONGER

Thursday's statement was regarded as much stronger in this respect. ". . . Since the Nationalist government purports also to be the government of China we cannot recognize both Peking and Taiwan at the same time."

Ambassador Hsueh Yu-chi said he was "distressed" by the latest comments of Mr. Sharp.

If Mr. Sharp's statements have been growing stronger regarding Taiwan, Ambassador Hsueh has also been speaking out more forcefully to Canadian audiences. Over the last year he has been talking of the dangers and difficulties involved in any Canada-Peking diplomatic swap, but recently he has strengthened his statements.

". . . It is legally wrong and morally untenable for any friendly foreign government to switch its diplomatic recognition to the Communist regime in China," he said several weeks ago in Hamilton.

Neutral diplomatic observers in Ottawa say there is little else that Mr. Hsueh can do except take his message directly to the Canadian people.

HAD DIFFERENT STAND

Prior to last year's general election, there was little official expectation that Canada and Peking would complete any diplomatic arrangement. Both Prime Minister Trudeau and Mr. Sharp had said should an overture be made to Peking, they would not agree to severing relations with Taiwan, also known as Formosa.

Mr. Trudeau had said that Peking might decline "unless we agreed to break off diplomatic relations with Formosa, something I would not do."

But the government's position subsequently changed in this respect and last Jan. 21, Mr. Sharp said on television that Canada's ties with Taiwan "might" end if Peking were recognized. Subsequently, he said these ties would "of course be affected."

DENYING CHARGES that he is a banker and courier for the Cosa Nostra is Jack Pullman, 67, who was staying at a Toronto hotel this week. The Russian-born investment dealer, who lived in Toronto from 1948 until 1965, was recently named by U.S. Attorney Robert Morgenthau as an employee of Meyer Lansky, reported to have a stranglehold on gambling in the Bahamas and Las Vegas.

CAR OR WIFE UP FOR SALE

CANTERBURY, England (UPI) — Ken Shaw is advertising his wife for sale.

His wife Marie found herself in the "for sale" columns of a local newspaper Tuesday because she complained his beloved sports car was cramped and drafty.

"Car or wife must go," read the advertisement. "Car — 1963 MGB, red, all extras, $1,200. Wife—1944, blonde, 5 ft., 36-24-36, $60,000 or nearest offer."

Said Shaw: "For the sake of peace in the home, one of them has got to go."

Territorial Waters Cover Island Bays

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada will enclose many bays in the Queen Charlotte Islands and Vancouver Island as territorial waters and fishing limits to become effective June 11.

External Affairs Minister Michell Sharp announced in the Commons Wednesday the position of baselines in three areas on which the territorial sea and fishing zones are based.

They are the west coast of Vancouver Island, the west coast of the Queen Charlottes and the east coast of Nova Scotia.

Sharp said the government will require new legislation before it can declare Queen Charlotte Sound an exclusive Canadian fishing zone.

No baselines have yet been established for the Arctic Coast.

The baselines are drawn from headland to headland and do not follow the sinuosities of the coast, as previously. The territorial sea extends three miles seaward from the baselines, the fishing zone an additional nine miles.

In the Queeen Charlottes, the largest bay enclosed as territorial sea is Rennell Sound. Other bodies enclosed are Beresford Bay, Athlow Bay, Cartwright Sound, Englefield Bay and Gowgaia Bay.

Waters off Vancouver Island enclosed include, from south to north, Barkley Sound, Clayoquot Sound, Sydney Inlet, Nootka Sound, Esperanza Inlet, Kyuquot Sound, Checloset Bay, Brooks Bay and Quatsino Sound.

Lloyd R. Crouse (PC—South Shore) said the announcement five years after legislation was passed is welcome but incomplete.

The headland-to-headland baselines across the mouths of bays would run right into French waters off the islands of Ste. Pierre-Miquelon, south of Newfoundland.

The government had given no word in the statement of an agreement with France and was not applying itself to this problem.

There were plans for a common market fisheries base on Ste. Pierre-Miquelon and this would have injurious effects unless Canadian fisheries rights on the Grand Banks were defined soon.

Frank Howard (NDP—Skeena) said the statement leaves blank the Queeen Charlotte Sound and Davis Strait area of British Columbia. This left the area open to claims of historic fishing rights by Japan and Russia.

Howard said the government should protect the whole continental shelf through "closed fishing lines."

Jet Belt Creates Wingless Wonder

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — A man can strap on a new rocket belt and go sailing off for miles without wings.

Textron's Bell Aerosystems Co., developer of the jet belt under contract from the defence department, has announced that the belt has carried a man at an altitude of 25 feet with speeds up to 30 miles an hour in tests at the Niagara Falls Airport.

The time and distance aloft are secret.

The new belt replaces one introduced in 1961 by Bell — a hydrogen-peroxide system capable of flying a man for 21 seconds at up to 60 miles an hour, covering more than 800 feet.

The new belt is powered by a fan-jet engine about two feet long and a foot in diameter. It burns standard kerosene-type jet fuel.

CAN TURN IN AIR

The engine, developed by Williams Research Corp. of Walled Lake, Mich., is mounted vertically with two ducts just behind and outside of the pilot's shoulders. The ducts, pointed down, provide the upward thrust and can be turned to permit manoeuvring in the air.

Robert J. May, Bell's jet belt project manager, said: "The scope of military and civilian applications is limited only by the imagination and ingenuity of its potential users."

He listed such things as riot control, rescue operations and soldiers crossing rivers or minefields.

The pilot will have a battery-powered radio to maintain communications with the ground.

Assignment Review Ordered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defence Secretary Melvin R. Laird, expressing shock at the loss of three brothers with the destroyer Frank E. Evans, today ordered a special review of United States service assignment policies.

Laird issued a memorandum to Assistant Defence Secretary Roger Kelley a day after the U.S. Navy disclosed that three brothers of a Niobrara, Neb., family were missing aboard the destroyer cut in two by an Australian aircraft carrier in the South China Sea.

The three were Gary Sage, 22, and his brothers Gregory, 21, and Kelly, 19.

Laird suggested Kelley study the assignment policies of the army, navy, air force and marines to see whether they should be changed to prevent assignment of members of a single family to the same ship or unit.

A defence department spokesman said earlier it was navy policy to let brothers serve on the same ship if they requested it.

He said the brothers, the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest E. Sage of Niobrara, about 40 miles west of Sioux City, were all musketmen aboard the Evans.

Gasoline Leak

WINONA, Minn. (AP)—A gasoline leak, estimated at several thousand gallons, escaped from an oil barge docked in this Mississippi River city Wednesday night, spewing what an engineer called a "potentially dangerous quantity of gas into the river." But a fire department spokesman said that he thought the gasoline would break up in heavy current between Winona and La Crosse, Wis.

Little Sheets of Film Seen as End to Schoolbooks

MONTREAL (CP) — Children carrying books home from school will soon be a rare sight, a Canadian microfilm expert has predicted.

"Very soon children won't be carrying textbooks but little sheets of film called microfiche," Walter Steel, micro-data manager of Bell and Howell of Canada, Ltd., in Toronto, told librarians at the annual conference of the Special Libraries Association.

About 1,500 delegates from North American and overseas are attending the convention until Thursday. The association represents about 7,000 specialized libraries in business, government and educational institutions.

Mr. Steel said in a panel discussion that microfiche—a four-by-six-inch sheet of film which can store virtually any type of information—increases a library's capacity for information and allows users much easier access to it.

George Harmon, manager of information systems at Information International Inc. in Cambridge, Mass., illustrated what the future will bring when he held up a two-inch square of film called "ultra-fiche" containing the complete Bible.

Mr. Harmon said combination microfilm-computer systems already exist which produce data, store it on microfilm, accept further information on microfilm and spew any of it back to the the user.

If effect, such techniques could eliminate libraries as they are known now.

"The era of the lending library is coming to an end," said Donald Avedon, manager of microfilm products, Charles Bruning Co. in Mt. Prospect, Ill.

LINER COSTS MAYOR'S JOB

LONG BEACH, Calif. (Reuters) — The mayor who signed the deal to bring the Queen Mary to Long Beach was defeated in a city council election Tuesday after a campaign that focused on soaring costs for the conversion of the former luxury liner into a museum and convention centre.

The Queen Mary, scheduled to open for tourists early next year, was budgeted to cost $8,000,000, but the total cost of the ship and conversion rose to $45,000,000.

Sick Heart Signalled By Radio

A unique ambulance service will start shortly in Sanich.

Municipal fire chief Joseph Sutherland said Tuesday night equipment for transmitting a patient's heart activity from the Saanich ambulance by radio signal to hospital is expected to arrive later this week or early next week.

The equipment would go into operation soon after it arrives, he said.

The chief was reporting to the municipal fire committee on the pilot project, which is a first in Canada.

The project was financed by a $25,000 federal grant.

The experiment is aimed at providing faster help for victims of heart attacks.

Dr. Peter Ransford, Victoria physician and chairman of the traffic and safety committee of the B.C. Medical Association, said ambulance attendants will attach a device which will record and transmit the patient's heart activity.

This is then sent by radio signal to an oscilloscope in the coronary care unit at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Church Debt-Free

The Anglican Church of Saint Mary the Virgin, Oak Bay, is now debt-free.

In 10 years the parish has paid off $500,000 on the stone buildings and church hall; purchased and demolished a building to provide a parking lot; built the new church of Saint Philip at 2928 Eastdowne.

"In addition we have contributed substantially to missions at home and abroad," a church spokesman said today.

"We feel this is a considerable achievement."

The present church of Saint Mary, seating 700 people, was built in 1959 by Farmer Construction Ltd. and designed by Wade, Stockdill and Armour.

The original church was built and dedicated in 1911.

Salt Water Laps Growing

UNITED NATIONS (Reuters) — Mankind's age-old attempt to extract drinking water from the oceans of the world is finally succeeding, says a United Nations report.

Desalted water available for drinking has reached the figure of 133,000,000 gallons a day, an increase of 34 per cent over the figure two years ago, said the report. Another 70,000,000 gallons are available for daily use as fresh water but not potable.

Some 25 desalination plants were completed in 1967 and 1968 —20 in developing countries— and another 14 are currently under construction.

9 IN MEMORIAM

BITTERMAN—In loving memory of our dear daughter and sister Annette, her husband, Ernest, and two children, Terri Lynn and Sandra Lee, who were taken from us in a landslide on June 5, 1968.
Beyond the gate our loved ones
Find happiness and rest
And there is comfort in the thought
That a loving God knows best.
—Always remembered and sadly missed by mom, dad, Kris, Bernice, Ruth, Julian and the families.

BITTERMAN — Ernie, Annette, Terri and Sandra who passed away June 5th, 1968.
Remembrance is a golden chain
Death tries to break but all in vain;
To have, to love, and then to part
Is the greatest sorrow of one's heart.
The years may wipe out many things,
But this they wipe out never—
The memory of those happy days
When we were all together.
—Always remembered by Alfred, Linda and Kathy.

Brain Child Of Gaglardi Given Birth

A special office designed to aid hard core unemployed in finding their way back into the labor market was opened in the Central Building Monday, but nobody wants to talk about it.

The agency, called the Provincial Alliance of Businessmen, is a brain child of usually verbose Minister Without Portfolio P. A. Gaglardi, but Thursday morning the minister was still saying nothing about the new organization.

"The office has opened, I've hired a group of people, and they're in the process of being trained," he told the Times, "and that's about all I can say right now."

Gaglardi said he would be ready to make statements about the functions and aims of the new agency by June 15.

R. S. Price, an executive with the new Victoria office said any comment about the Alliance would have to come from Gaglardi.

In earlier statements Gaglardi said the Victoria office would likely be the forerunner of offices to be located at Vancouver and Nanaimo.

He said if the three initial offices are successful, others might be established at Nelson, Kamloops, Kelowna, Castlegar and Prince George.

At the time, Gaglardi said, he was finding it difficult to find sufficient staff with proper qualifications because the job would require a combination of executive-working man-public relations-humanitarian attitudes.

Thursday he said Victoria staff had been found, but that names and positions would not be released until June 15.

News Carrier's Condition Fair

A 13-year-old newspaper boy is in fair condition today in St. Joseph's Hospital with a fractured skull received in a car-bicycle accident about 3:30 Wednesday afternoon.

Police said Stephen Steadman, 3323 Sparton, was leaving a driveway on his paper route at 4968 Old West Road, and rode his bike into the travelled portion of the roadway.

He was struck by a southbound car driven by Samuel William Jordon, 6252 Oldfield. Damage to the car was $250.

Lorne M. Newson, 4185 Carey Road is in fairly good condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital following a two-car crash at Cedar Hill and Cedar Hill Cross Road about 8 p.m. Wednesday.

He suffered fractured ribs, cuts and bruises to the right arm and leg and a nose injury.

Police said his car was westbound on Cedar Hill Road when it was in collision with one driven south on the intersecting road by Violet Elsie Foot, 3956 Larchwood.

She was not injured. Damage to Newson's car was $2,000.

Scientists Seek Grant Continuity

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — There was a clear cry for more money Wednesday night as eight different associations came before the special Senate committee on science policy in support of medical research.

And after a late-night session, attended by more than 30 doctors, Senator Allister Grosart said "there has to be a very substantial increase in spending on research."

"It's not just a case of getting a bigger federal grant," said one of the doctors who helped pack the small committee room, "it's a case of getting some financial continuity so we can plan a few years ahead."

Dr. Harold Copp, head of the department of physiology of the University of British Columbia, who appeared on behalf of the National Cancer Institute, said that in the United States government spending on medical research is nearly $1 per capita, while in Canada it is less than two cents.

The institute's brief suggested that the federal government enter a matching grant program with voluntary agencies. Dr. Copp said this could begin with the government giving, say, 20 cents for each $1 donated through voluntary agencies.

"Such an arrangement would also be of advantage to the government in that its investment in this form would have a two-or-three-fold yield in terms of research effort."

The Association of Canadian Medical Colleges said it is "concerned that an inadequate rate of expansion of funds . . . will interfere with the recruitment and maintenance of academic staff at the universities and indirectly affect the quality of educational programs for the health professions. . . ."

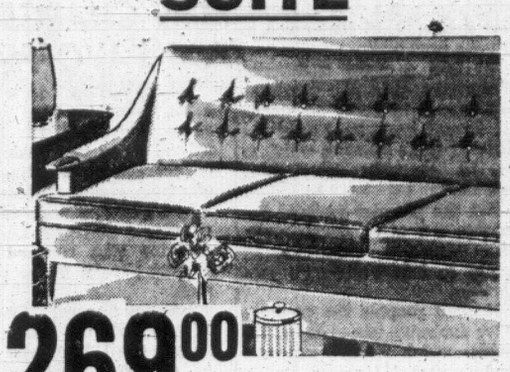

Along with asking for a "substantial expansion" of federal spending, the association said "a predictable, longer-range policy on financial support is necessary to permit rational planning . . ."

Similar suggestions came from the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Canada, the Canadian Physiological Society, The Canadian Society for Immunology, The Canadian Society for Clinical Investigation, The Canadian Association of Anatomists, and a group of chairmen of university pathology departments.

Senator J. A. Sullivan (PC—Ontario), a surgeon, said all the presentations had one thing in common—"money, money, money."

Bennett to Press Guaranteed Pay

Premier Bennett is taking his plan for "negative income tax"—a form of guaranteed annual wage—back to a federal-provincial cosstitutional conference in Ottawa next week.

He told a news conference Wednesday that all provinces had agreed to make no stands on formal positions before the June 11 to 13 meeting which is to be "strictly a working session."

But the premier restated the income tax and federal-provincial tax-share proposals he made to last February's conference.

He will propose the province have exclusive use of direct tax fields, which include coporate and personal income taxes, "except to the extent necessary to finance a nationally-administered guaranteed annual income plan."

This would replace the present form of equalization payments, welfare allowances and social security programs and the guaranteed income, or negative tax, would mean a national standard of payments directly to individuals rather than governments.

The province, he said, would assume full fiscal responsibility for education, health and welfare as well as payment of the annual wage.

The premier will travel to Ottawa after attending Monday's opening of the High Arrow Dam, one of three that form the water-control and hydro development on the Columbia River.

VICE SQUAD MEN CHARGED FOR PAYOFFS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eight Columbus, Ohio, policemen were indicted by a federal grand jury Wednesday on charges of accepting payoffs from organized gamblers.

In addition, a man accused of being a Columbus numbers operator was charged with making payoffs to the policemen.

Attorney-General John N. Mitchell said the indictments, returned in U.S. district court in Columbus after a long investigation, named the chief of the Columbus vice squad, the chief of the intelligence squad and six other vice squad members.

All were accused of conspiring to prevent the federal government from lawfully collecting wagering taxes.

Artists Of India In Show

Folk art, created in small remote villages in India, will be on exhibition and sale at the Pandora Box Gallery, 1208 Wharf, from Friday to June 27.

Organizer of the show, K. S. Annand of New Delhi, travels to remote regions of his country, supplying paper and art materials to peasants who show particular artistic ability.

He then gathers the various works, displaying them and selling them in North America and Europe.

The local gallery is the first Canadian one to present the show.

In the show will be featured 10 antique folk paintings that are more than 100 years old. Made with vegetable dyes on crude hand-made paper, the paintings depict customs, rituals and superstitions.

WELL-KNOWN CREATIONS

Also to be seen are 20 contemporary batiks. These are the work of Mawasi Ram, who lives in a small village 30 miles from Delhi. Until 15 years ago he earned a living by selling clay, travelling by donkey on his rounds. Encouraged to paint and sculpture, Ram's creations are now well-known in both the United States and Europe.

Also in the show are wax drawings, typical of the paintings made on mud walls of huts in remote tribal and village areas.

A preview of the show will be held Friday. During its three-week presentation, the show will be open six days a week from 11:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. It will also be seen Fridays from 7 to 9 p.m.

A display of hand-crafted jewelry and hand-embroidered clothing and shoes will also be included in the show.

Artist Plans Long Stay In Hong Kong

Stephen Lowe, one of Western Canada's outstanding Oriental artists, will leave Victoria at the end of June for an indefinite stay in Hong Kong.

His wife, Eunice, and their three children, are going with him.

The 31-year-old artist expects to be away for at least six months.

"When I return, I plan to make a tour of eastern Canada and Europe," he said.

He is going to Hong Kong to get new ideas and to visit the famous Chinese painter, Chao Shao-An, 70, who will soon be retiring.

Before leaving the city, the artist will hold a final exhibition of his works at the Village Art Gallery, Bastion Square, from June 10 to 20.

Exhibiting with him will be Mrs. Pui Jan Lo Wong, Newton Gardens, who recently emigrated to Canada. It will be her first show.

She is the widow of a famous painter, Way Shiu-Keung, who died in 1942 during the war.

Lowe will have about 16 paintings on show, mostly landscapes. In his new works, his technique has undergone some changes. His landscapes are truly atmospheric and sensitively drawn.

The artist has gone a long way since he came to Canada in 1956. He studied art at the Institute of Chinese Art in Hong Kong and returned in 1959 for further study.

In the last few years, he has exhibited in major centres in British Columbia and his works have become widely known in the prairie provinces and Ontario.

Slander Suit Appeal Lost

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Appeal Court Wednesday upheld a $3,500 slander award to Teamsters' leader Ed Lawson against IWA Vancouver local president Syd Thompson.

Mr. Thompson had appealed a B.C. Supreme Court judge's finding that he slandered Mr. Lawson at a Vancouver and District Labor Council meeting in September, 1966. The appeal court ruled unanimously Mr. Lawson had been slandered in his calling as a trade union organizer and the damage award could not be regarded as excessive.

Larger Navy Role Has Top Priority

Protect Arctic Waters

OTTAWA (CP)—A defence spokesman said today Canada's naval role will be enlarged in line with Prime Minister Trudeau's policy of giving high priority to the protection of national sovereignty.

The prime minister announced early in April that the protection of sovereignty is at the top of the list of priorities in the review of the defence forces.

Defence Minister Cadieux said in the Commons Wednesday that those with a "special interest in naval affairs" should be encouraged by the prime minister's statements.

The naval role was one "which has to be enlarged."

The spokesman said Mr. Trudeau's April statement calling for protection of Canadian territories and coastlines would mean the navy would have the Arctic Ocean to guard as well as the Atlantic and Pacific.

Mr. Trudeau had placed this ahead of continental defence, NATO and United Nations peacekeeping operations.

Mr. Cadieux confirmed Wednesday that Canada will take over responsibility for the air defence of additional Canadian territory.

Replying in the Commons to Michael Forrestall (PC—Dartmouth Halifax East), the defence minister said the northern region of the North American Air Defence Command will assume responsibility for another 375,000 square miles of Canadian territory.

One of the five NORAD regions was being closed down in mid-September. At that time the northern region with headquarters at North Bay, Ont., would take on surveillance of the additional territory.

New Bus Strike Predicted

Another labor dispute will likely cut bus transportation between Vancouver Island and the Mainland later this month.

The Amalgamated Transit Union, bargaining for 150 drivers with Vancouver's Pacific Stage Lines, said today negotiations with B.C. Hydro have broken down.

STRIKE NOTICE

Both sides have agreed to extend the jurisdiction of government mediator Clark Gilmour to June 13. While the union has served strike notice on the company, it is not free to strike until 72 hours after Gilmour submits a report to the government's mediation commission.

John Harlow, president of the Vancouver local of the union, told the Times today both sides had rejected each other's final positions at meetings Wednesday.

He added that he hopes bargaining progress can be made with the mediator before Gilmour's jurisdiction runs out.

The union has been asking for a 15 per cent wage increase and what it calls minor fringe benefits. Management has offered seven per cent, the hike accepted by Vancouver city drivers for B.C. Hydro earlier this year. PSL drivers now get $3.32 houly.

Island-mainland bus service just resumed last Sunday after a 23-day strike by drivers for Victoria-based Vancouver Island Coach Lines.

HONOR PICKETS

Bus service to Vancouver from Victoria and Nanaimo is split between the two bus lines and if PSL drivers strike, they are certain to picket VICL bus-via-ferry runs.

PSL drivers honored the VICL picket lines when they appeared in Vancouver in the latter few days of the recent strike.

Joe Simpson, president of the Victoria local of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers which represents the VICL drivers, said "certainly" today when asked whether his drivers would refuse to cross PSL picket lines.

CONDEMNED OILMEN TO BE RELEASED

GENEVA (Reuters)—Biafra officially confirmed today reports that 18 European oil company employees under sentence of death will be freed.

The Biafran overseas press division office here said the governments of Gabon and the Ivory Coast had been asked to make arrangements for repatriation of the men — 14 Italians, three West Germans and one Lebanese.

The 18 men were captured last month when Biafran troops over-ran their oil rig camp in Midwest Nigeria. Ten other Italian oilmen and one Jordanian were killed in the raid.

The men al are employees of the Italian state oil corporation AGIP.

The survivors of the raid were sentenced to death by a special Biafran tribunal which found them guilty of aiding Nigeria in the civil war.

Limits Change Worrying U.S.

WASHINGTON (CP) — A state department spokesman Thursday reiterated United States concern over Canada's latest extension of territorial sea and fishing limits, charging that the move is "inconsistent with international law." (See story on Page 32.)

It was recalled that the U.S. made a formal complaint to Ottawa when the first phase of the new Canadian limits was announced in 1967.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp announced Wednesday that new areas off Nova Scotia, the west coasts of Vancouver Island and the Queen Charlottes, will be enclosed under the controversial headlands - to - headlands plan, effective June 11.

When the new limits were announced in 1967 for eastern Labrador and eastern and southern Newfoundland, the U.S. government issued a formal objection, saying the U.S. did not recognize the validity of the lines.

"We did not concur in the 1967 lines and we do not concur in these new lines," the spokesman said today.

When the state department became aware in April that Canada was planning to announce these new lines, Ottawa was referred to "the position the United States stated in 1967."

Although there are reciprocal arrangements permitting U.S. and Canadian fishing boats to operate in each other's waters, the U.S. is opposed to the principle involved. The spokesman said it could lead to grave trouble if "the principle was extended" to some other areas of the world where relations are not as friendly as between Canada and the U.S.

As for Sharp's statement that new legislation would be required before similar lines could be declared for the Gulf of St. Lawrence and other areas, the spokesman said the U.S. "would have some very strong views" on any such move.

Hanoi Accuses U.S. Of Prolonging War

PARIS (Reuters) — North Vietnam today accused President Nixon of seeking to prolong the Vietnam war and said the United States was trying to use South Vietnamese government forces as cannon fodder.

South Vietnam at the 20th Paris peace talks session said that no quesion related to the future of the country's 17,000,000 people could be discussed or solved without the Saigon government taking part.

U.S. chief negotiaor Henry Cabot Lodge concentrated on asking detailed questions about a set of Viet Cong peace proposals made last month.

The U.S. statement also told Hanoi and the National Liberation Front they were unrealistic in demanding that the U.S. abandon its support for the Saigon government.

The session came three days before a summit meeting on Midway Island in the Pacific between Nixon and President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vienam.

CRITICIZES NIXON

Ha Van Lau, acting chief of the North Vienamese delegation, read a tough six-page speech, including a virulent attack on Nixon.

He said Nixon was outdoing President Johnson in his attempts to gain time to consolidate the Saigon administration. He said the U.S. would try to use the South Vietnamese as cannon fodder, but Nixon's objective was impossible.

He called the Saigon governmen "a sick man breathing his last."

The only honorable solution was for the U.S. to end to war on the terms of the 10-point plan proposed by the Viet Cong, Lau said.

Pham Dang Lam, South Vietnamese negotiator, earlier declared that seeking to eliminate the duly elected Saigon government would only prolong the war and delay peace.

South Vietnam is determined to defend its "constitutional and legal government," he said.

Arabs Hit Israelis On War Anniversary

BY PATRICK MASSEY

TEL AVIV (Reuters) — Arab guerrillas killed three Israeli soldiers in a Gaza Strip ambush today, anniversary of the start of the six-day Arab-Israeli war of 1967.

The anniversary also saw grenade and bomb explosions in Jerusalem and the Gaza Strip, an abortive student demonstration and spotty response to calls for a strike by Arabs in territory captured two years ago.

Guerrillas with a bazooka opened fire on an Israeli Army command car patrolling south of Gaza town. Three Israelis were killed and three were injured. The ambushers escaped.

One Israeli soldier and four Arab civilians were injured by a grenade in front of Herod's Gate in Jerusalem. Several persons were arrested.

In the Gaza Strip, home of 300,000 refugees and a centre of Arab guerrilla activity since it was captured by Israel two years ago, a hand grenade was thrown into a market place at Rafiah. No injuries were reported.

RAIL ROUTE APPROVED

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons transport committee today approved a CPR application for a new rail route betwee the Natal coal fields and the new port of Roberts Bank, south of Vancouver.

The application was for construction of a 34-mile branch line from the Natal field north to the existing CPR line, and operating rights on about 40 miles of track owned by three companies between Mission and Roberts Bank.

Russia Issues Appeal For Communist Unity

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Leonid Brezhnev, Soviet Communist party chief, appealed today to representatives of 75 other Communist parties gathered here to close their ranks in the face of a danger from imperialism.

Brezhnev, opening a long-awaited Communist summit conference in the Kremlin's ornate St. George's Hall, told the delegates that the attention of the whole world was focused on their discussions.

"The imperialists of all countries and their henchmen are afraid of our unity and of course will try to do all they can to belittle the importance of the conference, to present its proceedings and results in a distorted light," he warned.

China, North Vietnam, North Korea, Yugoslavia, Albania and the Japanese Communist party have all stayed away from the conference, which is the culmination of six years of Kremlin efforts to organize the gathering despite divisions in the Communist world.

Rogers Sees Withdrawal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State William P. Rogers indicated today there is a possibility of some early withdrawal of U.S. forces from Vietnam, but he declined to make "any predictions."

Rogers said at a news conference that training of South Vietnamese troops to replace some American units was proceeding "at a rapid pace," but said the United States was not pressing the Saigon regime on this.

Countless Uses Proposed For Benson's Big Surplus

By GERARD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP) — The scramble for Finance Minister Benson's $250,000,000 surplus began in the Commons Wednesday.

Opposition MPs, alerted to the surplus the night before in Mr. Benson's budget speech, found a billion dollars worth of uses for it.

They suggested bigger family allowances and old age pensions, subsidies for farmers, and greater tax exemptions.

But Mr. Benson's two-per-cent social development tax, levied in last fall's budget and extended in the latest one to the end of 1970, drew the most fire.

The Commons gave second reading to the October budget legislation by a vote of 101 to 75, Liberals voting alone. Then clause-by-clause study began.

In the Senate meanwhile, debate on second reading of the omnibus bill to amend the Criminal Code continued. Senator Lionel Choquette (L—Ontario) attacked the provisions on abortion, lotteries and homosexuality.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp announced to the Commons the limits which Canada intends to set on its territorial seas and fishing zones.

And Defence Minister Leo Cadieux confirmed that a squadron of Russian bombers was intercepted off Newfoundland May 14. Mr. Cadieux, apparently attaching little significance to the incident, wrote it off as a good exercise for the defence system.

Commons debate on the tax bill continues today.

John Gilbert (NDP—Toronto Broadview) said Wednesday Mr. Benson is more interested in balancing the budget than in caring for the poor. There was nothing in the budget to help the western farmer or the pensioner.

P. B. Rynard (PC—Simcoe North) said those with low incomes should have been exempted from the tax and it should have been shared with the provinces to pay medical care insurance bills.

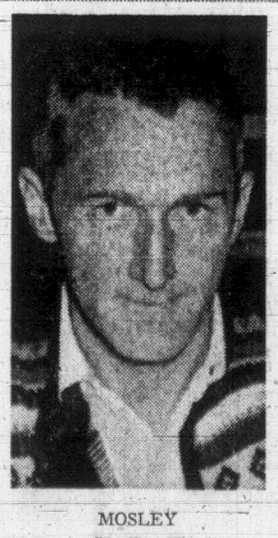

Gilbert Rondeau (Creditiste—Shefford) said the government wants people to tighten their belts at a time when stores are full and unemployment is high.

Mr. Rondeau said health schemes should be left to private enterprise and the government should concentrate on economic stability.

Nudes . . . Drugs . . . and Hippies And a Drop in Milk Production

By ED GOULD

CROFTON — A dire July 1 of nudity, drugs, hippie orgies in the woods, loud music and a resultant drop in milk production was augured at a Crofton Ratepayers meeting Wednesday night.

The dreadful forecast is the result of an application by MCM Productions and CKLG of Vancouver to stage the first annual Vancouver Island rock festival in Fuller Lake arena July 1. Ten bands would battle for the ear-drums of up to "10,000" persons.

Mrs. Jean Fyffe, president of Chemainus Ratepayers, said her group had already sent a letter of protest to North Cowichan Council to ban the bands.

"You never know. We might get 6,000 hippies at a thing like that," she said.

The application, which will also be protested by Crofton Ratepayers, will be decided at the next council meeting June 11.

Ald. Gerry Smith of North Cowichan said it would be "unfair to bring those kind of people in here when we'll be having a horse show in the ring the same day. Then they'll want to come back every year anyway."

The request had come through the recreation commission. "This has nothing to do with recreation at all," he said.

Smith said the issue should never have been raised at ratepayers' meetings but could have been quietly turned down by council. "Now it will be in headlines in the press."

He said "hippies would bring in dope and everything. How would you like your daughter to get mixed up with a bunch like that?"

Ratepayer Shirley Mah said the area had its share of dope but Smith predicted a tenfold increase. He said the Aldergrove festival had "led to nude swimming and one farmer complained his cows didn't give a drop of milk for days afterward."

Mrs. Fyffe said the applicants had offered to supply their own security and cleanup crew for the arena but that did not cover Fuller Lake Park where many would be expected to billet for the night before and after. It might even last for days, she said.

A $1,000 profit realized might be lost through damage to the park and surrounding area. She said a similar four-day rock festival at Aldergrove eventually cost the merchants there between $15,000 and $20,000 in damages "they'll never get back."

One ratepayer suggested the festival would put "Fuller Lake on the map" and bring in tourist dollars. Chairman Ken Mosley said, "Aldergrove Merchants did $16,000 worth of business but that still works out to 32,000 hippies spending 50 cents each."

Our hosts at Santa Barbara were out to accentuate the positive. But, while they didn't emphasize the negative factor of continuing oil leakage, neither did they insult our intelligence by insisting that everything was hunky-dory on that golden shore.

As the dourly outspoken Santa Barbara News-Press revealed in stories and pictures on the day of our fishing trip, it isn't.

That evening, I set out for a walk on sands that seemed to sway gently underfoot—an effect not produced by American bourbon but by hours on a rolling deck.

In front of the clustered tourist lodges, and on along the beach in the direction of the breakwater-sheltered boat harbor, the sand was clean to the surf-line. To check that visual impression, I took off shoes and socks and shuffled barefoot.

Earlier, oilmen had denied vigorously the charge that they'd brought fresh sand in to replace a crude-soaked natural supply. This stuff appeared to be ocean's authentic byproduct. Further, it left no stains.

Time to reverse direction. I walked back past the Santa Barbara Inn and the other hotels that face the ocean across a wide, palm-bordered thoroughfare.

After a day of brilliant California sunlight, the evening cool was welcome. A guitar spoke plaintively from a green strip above, where a clutch of boys and girls had gathered. Offshore on the leases, the lighted drilling platforms glowed like dim crescent moons across the miles of channel.

A few steps farther, and I caught the smell of crude oil.

★

I followed my nose down to wet sand washed by the rush and retreat of a gentle surf. Oil from the plastic-tented but still seeping main fissure in the channel patterned the band of beach exposed by the ebb.

The dark, wavering lines wandered in and out among the wrack of seaweed washed ashore by the day's strong winds. They ran on into the twilight for as far as I walked —stubborn reminders of a trouble not yet cured.

The chief source of that continuing visitation, oilmen had told us earlier, was a flukish breaching of sedimentary layers that roof the undersea oil pool.

Only once in 1,100 holes drilled off the California coast had the thing happened.

But happen it did, last January out where Union Oil Company's Platform 'A' now showed brighter with the coming of dusk.

Result: a menaced tourist trade, a tangle of claim and counter-claim, and a conservationist-backed stand by Santa Barbara city and county officials against further drilling.

★

As a visitor whose stay was brief, I'm in no position to offer expert comment on the Santa Barbara problem.

However, to their credit, the oilmen do seem to have conducted and paid for a fairly effective cleanup of the worst of the invasion.

We have never been hit by major oil spills in our South Island waters. That waits for the day when some holed and sunken tanker losses its cargo to the straits.

Against the chance, it might be well to note that by far the most effective agent of about 3,000 suggested to Santa Barbara was straw spread on the ocean. The straw, I was informed, soaked up as much as 10 times its volume in crude oil on its shoreward drift.

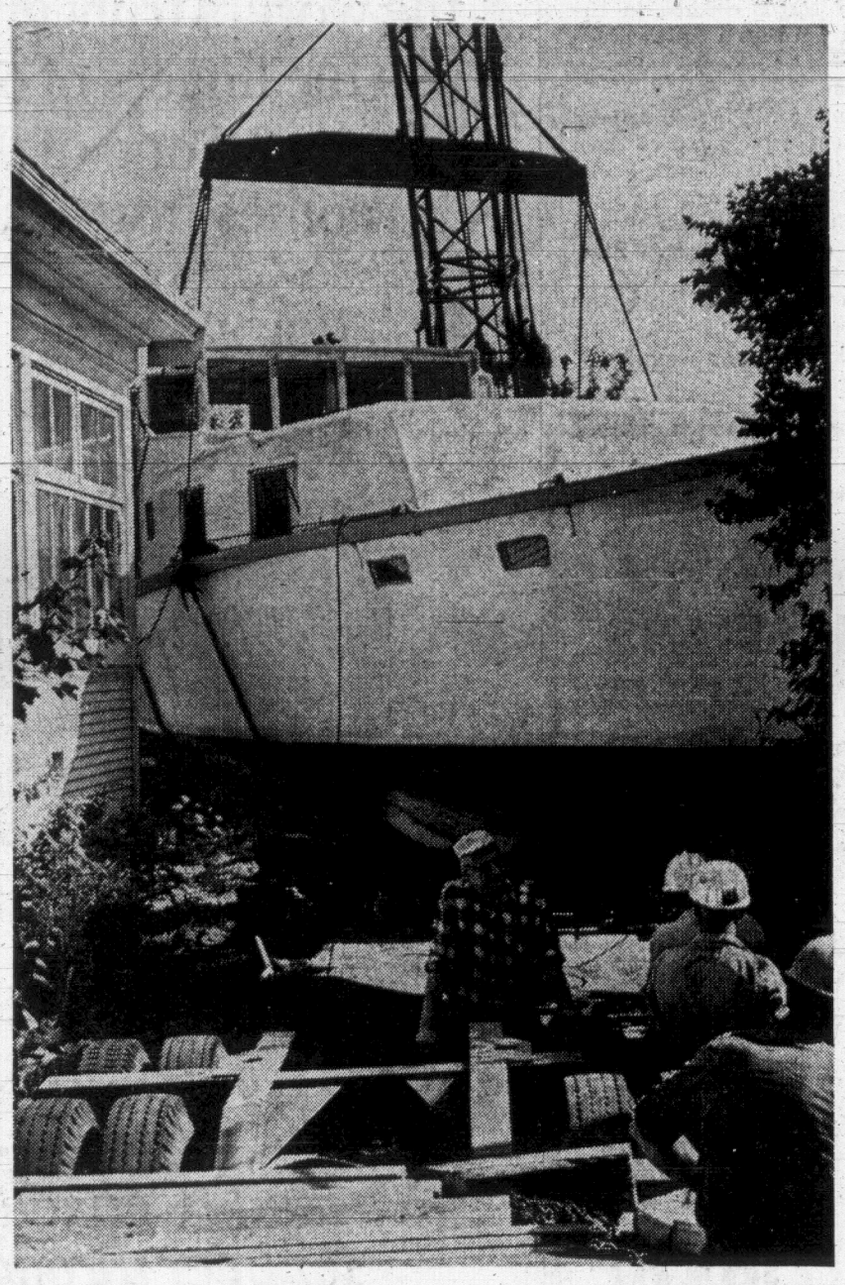

At tideline, it was bulldozed into heaps, trucked off, and burned.

I can also report from my own observations—which are not influenced by a gift spinning reel added to my gear—that Santa Barbara remains one of the loveliest and most pleasant cities I've ever had the luck to set foot in.

We have no palms worth speaking of here, and our mountain backdrops are borrowed from Washington State. Yet in an indefinable way, the place reminds me of Victoria.

And higher praise I can't bestow on any town.

BACKYARD BOTTLENECK faced by skipper "Mac" McCurdy, centre, and the trucking crew when they sprung his 41-foot troller Quest Wednesday from her Rithet Street "building yard" was solved by lots of patience, time and the shearing of eaves and bushes.

Man Builds Boat in Yard But There's One Little . . .

By PAT DUFOUR

Sixty-egith-year-old "Mac" McCurdy spent all his spare time in the past three years building a 41-foot troller in his backyard at 658 Rithet.

But when launching—day came Wednesday, he had one little problem.

He couldn't get it out.

When he started his project Mac had a vacant lot behind his property and an easy departure route when it came time to put his vessel in the water. Two months ago, builders started erecting a four-storey apartment house on the lot, blocking his exit.

This meant that the boat, 14 foot in the beam, had to be squeezed through the narrow alleyway between the McCurdy's house and their next-door neighbors'.

After spending almost three hours prying the boat loose from her land-bound mooring, painstaking swinging her into position and squeezing by the neighbors' barbecue by inches, the truckers found they could go no farther.

The only way would be to trim the overhanging eaves of their home. Mac and his wife, Esther, reluctantly agreed.

Then came the snail-like advance down the alleyway, made dangerous by the overhanging power lines.

By the time the truck and boat cargo were safely on the street a sizeable crowd had gathered, falling in behind as the truck made her way to Ogden Point and the crucial moment of launching.

Cameras clicked as the 11-ton trawler was swung into position and lowered into the water without incident.

Climbing aboard as she swung over the side of the jetty, the skipper said, "If I were a religious man, I'd give a prayer of thankfulness at this moment."

AGE IS REASON

This will be McCurdy's first crack at commercial fishing and he says his age is the reason he's decided to try it.

"No one wants to employ grey hairs."

Last April he retired for the second time, after being employed since 1964 as a mechanical technician in the University of Victoria's physics department.

But he's no stranger to the sea.

"My family has always lived around the water, I grew up with it."

Wednesday marked the launching of the 15th boat that McCurdy has built. Several of these were cabin cruisers built in Nova Scotia and one was an amphibious boat with retractable wheels which he build in St. Catharines, Ont.

HOSE FACTORIES

It was in St. Catharines that McCurdy first retired. He was running the last of five nylon hose factories that he's built. A moving piece of machinery fell on him, breaking both his legs and causing the phlebitis which plagues him to this day.

That was in 1961. The McCurdys headed for Victoria.

Instead of retiring as ordered by his doctor, McCurdy built himself a home on the Pat Bay Highway (one of seven he's constructed).

"When I sold out in Ontario I found myself bankrupt and had to start all over again. So I built the house, sold it, got myself a job at the university and started designing my next boat."

This was no mean feat in itself for a man slowed down with phelbitis and the sight of only one eye. The other has been operated on for cataracts.

In spite of his physical handicaps, McCurdy has no doubt that his third career will be successful. He's taken coastal navigation in a Greater Victoria night school course and has signed on a crew hand.

Lawrence Lambert, a 23-year-old electronics technician at the university, will be with McCurdy when he sets to sea June 15.

JAIL DEATH INQUEST CONTINUES

An inquest into the death of a man who died Friday in the city jail was adjourned Wednesday night after the jury viewed the body and heard identification evidence.

Anthony Ranger, 51, of no fixed address, was identified by a woman who said she lived with him.

The inquest will continue next Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the law courts.

The jury was told Ranger wore a brace around his neck as a result of a fall.

A police officer summonsed a passerby on the street when one person failed to appear on the six-man jury.

Berger Raps Price Tag For B.C. Tel

The president of British Columbia Telephone got a wrong number, according to Opposition Leader Tom Berger.

He called "absurd and ridiculous" a statement by J. Ernest Richardson that it will cost $1 billion for the government to take over the utility.

Berger told a press conference in Vancouver there was an "$822 million credibility gap" between Richardson's and former president Cyrus McLean's estimate.

The New Democratic Party leader said McLean's figure of $178 million is more logical.

Berger announced May 14 that if he leads the next government, B.C. Tel will be taken over by the province.

Health Hazard Seen In Cut Drug Flood

Teenyboppers Pool Weekly Allowances

By STEVE HUME

LSD and other soft drugs currently being taken on a massive scale by Victoria's drug-using youth are being adulterated with a family of drugs potentially as dangerous as heroin.

Young drug users have told the Times that the quantity and use of LSD in Victoria has proliferated tremendously in recent months.

"You wouldn't believe the amount of LSD circulating," said one youngster, who said he was in touch with the "heavy drug scene".

He said most dealing in the drug is done among the teenagers who use it on weekends when they have allowance money available.

"Right now it's at the point where some of the teenyboppers are pooling their allowances to buy 15 or 20 capsules and then dealing it to their close circle of friends," the youth said.

Amphetamines and methamphetamines, particularly dexedrine and in lesser quantities methedrine and benzedrine, are being used extensively to dilute everything from the psychotomimetic LSD or "acid," to the relatively mild mescaline, several young drug-users have told the Times.

"There is no pure acid in Victoria," one 20-year-old said, "and as far as I know it has always been cut with speed (amphetamines)."

"It's ironic," said one of his teen-age companions, "that a lot of kids that think of themselves as acid-heads have never experienced a real acid high. They've been running all along on speed."

They agreed that LSD in Victoria is available in large quantities, and can be obtained relatively quickly in the street market.

COMPLEX DANGERS

A high RCMP official agreed there is "a pretty fair market" in the city for drugs classified as speed in hip jargon.

The dangers involved in regular or prolonged use of the amphetamines and methamphetamines are complex, according to medical sources.

Dr. Roy Sutherland, a practising physician, said oral amphetamines like dexedrine and benzedrine are stimulants which affect the brain and spinal column.

Methedrine, the most commonly injected methamphetamine, known among drug users as crystal, is used by a minority of Victoria "heads," the youngsters told the Times.

LIKE FREIGHT TRAIN

It, too, affects the brain and spinal column as a stimulant, said Dr. Sutherland.

While the stimulants known as speed have a dramatic effect on the human system — one user said it was like a freight train going through his blood stream — the most serious dangers do not lie in immediate use.

What happens, Mr. Sutherland says, is that under prolonged use, the body's metabolism is speeded up and the effects over a long period of time can be similar to driving a car at too high rmp's.

"People can be blown up, just like car engines can be blown up," he said.

In a typical progression of methedrine injection, the user experiences a "run" of hyperactive behavior in which he finds it difficult to sleep and to eat.

OPEN TO DISEASE

This, said Dr. Sutherland, is where the real, and hidden, danger of getting "strung-out" on speed lies, because it depletes the body reserves of energy and drastically lowers resistance to even minor diseases and infections.

He said the users who are injecting or "cranking" crystal are extremely vulnerable to serious cases of bacteremia, septicemia and infectious hepatitis.

Because of the lowerd resistance even the common cold can be extremely dangerous to the "speed-freak."

Other immediate effects of oral emphetamines being used as heavy substitutes in Victoria supplies of LSD are confusion, unpredictable and irrational behavior, and possible violence.

There is a strong possibility of psychological dependence on the oral amphetamines, Dr. Sutherland said, and combined with a rising body tolerance level there can be a further danger of overdose.

He said more and more speed is required for less and less of a high as the body builds a tolerance to the drug, and said he knew of some psychologically addicted individuals using huge doses of 1,700 miligrams a day for a minor high.

ACUTE PARANOIA

With injected methamphetamines, like crystal, there is a danger of acute paranoia developing, because of extreme confusion and a zoom lens effect on the eyes which makes objects and people loom up immediately and then disappear abruptly.

A characteristic of speed freaks is the collection of weapons like guns or knives, and convictions that people are plotting against them.

Physical addiction and psychological dependence can develop with prolonged use of methedrine, and Charles Barber of the youth social work organization Cool-Aid says his information indicates heavy users of the drug have a maximum life expectancy of seven years left.

He said the maximum expected for a heroin addict is 15 years.

Barber said Cool-Aid is currently starting a campaign to educate young drug users of the latent dangers inherent in amphetamines in the hope they will turn away from the drugs classed as speed.

$1,500 BAIL SET IN ARSON CHARGE

George B. Bruce, 43, 5013 Cordova Bay Road, was charged in central court Wednesday with two counts of arson following a $20,000 blaze which gutted two houses earlier in the day.

He was remanded without plea until Friday, when he said he would like to get a lawyer. Bail was set at $1,500.

He is charged with burning two houses at 5013 and 5013A Cordova Bay Road, property of Mrs. Rica J. P. Bruce.

New Crystal To Have Domes And Four Pools

By JIM HUME

Victoria's new Crystal Garden will contain four swimming pools covered by three geodesic domes.

That's the way the final design will look if the special swimming pool committee, scheduled to meet for a final round of design discussions this afternoon, likes the latest concept.

Architect John A. Di Castri declined comment on his latest design prior to select committee presentation later today.

But committee chairman, Ald. Percy Frampton, confirmed that the aquatic centre was almost ready for unveiling to the full recreation committee and the public.

Frampton said the entire concept is "very exciting" and added it is "hard not to wax enthusiastic".

Main Pool Will Be T-Shaped

While this afternoon's meeting will be behind closed doors and city officials are stoically refusing comment, Frampton confirmed what the Times has learned over the past two weeks.

- The main pool will be T-shaped, with a 50-metre pool comprising the main length and a 25-metre poool forming the top of the T.
- The 25-metre section will also have diving wells for two three-metre towers and two one-metre towers.
- Both pools can be used for competitive or recreational swimming.
- The complex will also contain two other pools, one termed a familiarization pool with water varying in depth from six inches to 15 inches, the other, a training pool with water varying in depth from two feet to four feet.
- Observation windows will be built below the surface in the diving sections to enable coaches to observe trainees under water.
- The two intermediate pools will be built at levels different to the 50 and 25-metre pools.
- Provision will be made for seating accommodation for 900 spectators.

Latest Design Almost 'Perfect'

Frampton cautioned that today's meeting is merely to discuss final design.

"There could be some changes," he said. "But I think this latest design is just about perfect."

He added that following today's meeting it was hoped a full committee meeting could be called within the next few weeks for endorsement before proceeding to city council for approval.

Frampton said an earlier design by Di Castri had been sent back for revamping after it proved too rich for the city's financial blood.

"But that was a dream pool," he said. "We instructed Di Castri to put everything into the pool that we would like to have if we had unlimited funds.

"From that point we started to trim back to the budget and this is what we were looking at this afternoon—a tremendous concept within the budget."

Cost has been estimated at $1.6 million.

General location of the pool has been established roughly between Royal Athletic Park and the Curling Rink.

The three geodesic domes covering the complex will be of varying suites.

In construction circles a geodesic dome is "a design to reduce structural stress, to reduce the weight of the structure to a point at which building and the manufacture of building parts will be more economical."

Quebec Said Hurting B.C.'s Olympics Bid

Quebec should bow out quietly in its bid for the 1976 Summer Olympics because it is hurting B.C.'s bid for the '76 winter Olympics, Recreation Minister Kenneth Kiernan said today.

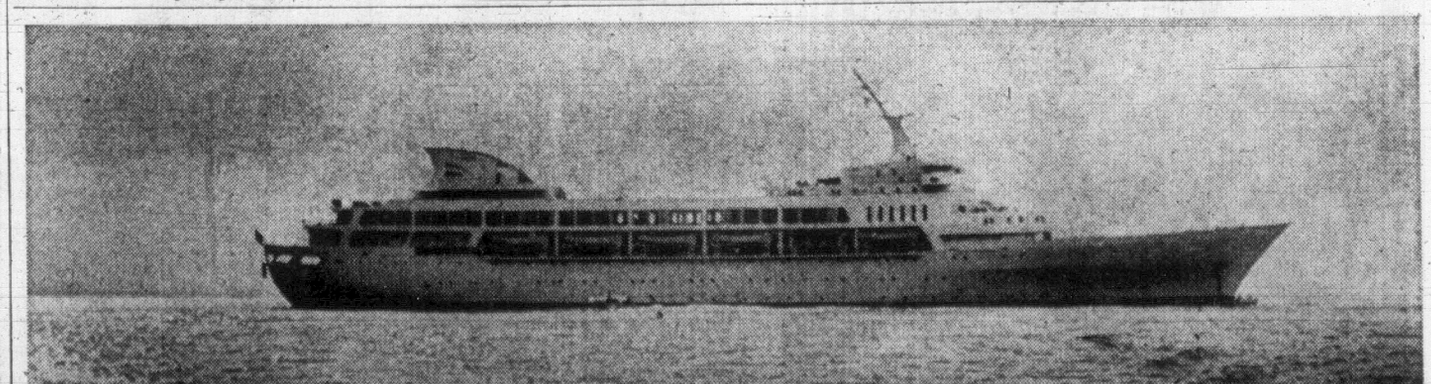

He said the federal government, by this week's budget, is having to chip in an additional $125 million to bail out Expo 67, much more than the Canadian taxpayer originally agreed to pay.

And Quebec so far has submitted little of substance in connection with its Olympic bid while B.C. has prepared detailed engineering and feasibility studies and submitted a "comprehensive program" for the winter Olympics in Garibaldi Park.

HIGHLY UNLIKELY

"It is highly unlikely that one country will be given both the summer and winter Olympics," said the minister, entering this morning's cabinet meeting.

"We do not think that the Quebec bid for the Summer Olympics is an any way enhancing our bid for the winter Olympics."

MOST MODERN SHIP AFLOAT, the $20 million Princess Italia, arrives in Victoria nine days from now, the first luxury liner to provide regularly-scheduled cruise service between San Francisco and Alaska via British Columbia coastal waters since the Klondike gold rush days of 1898. She will lay over in Victoria June 14 and 15 and will make seven two-day stops locally during two-week cruises this summer which will take her through the Inside Passage. The 490-foot ship, built in Trieste, Italy, in 1967, carries 420 passengers and a crew of 250. She will also be stopping at Vancouver and Prince Rupert, as well as Ketchikan, Juneau and Skagway in Alaska. Following her Alaska voyages she will make a 42-day cruise to the South Pacific.

Stephen Alone Lauds Budget

Victoria's Mayor Hugh Stephen, apparently alone among fellow mayors meeting in Ottawa, has spoken favorably of federal Finance Minister Benson's anti-inflationary measure of slowing commercial growth in the city.

General reaction at the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities was opposition to the scheme which affects 22 rapid-growth cities in British Columbiam Alberta and Ontario, including Victoria and Vancouver.

Mayor Stephen said he thinks "the proposal is good. The battle against inflation is our most important national objective."

"My area will suffer but it's for a good cause."

Set out in Tuesday's federal budget, the measure will force owners of commercial buildings constructed between now and 1970 to wait two years before claiming depreciation as a deduction from taxable income.

This will ensure, said Benson, an adequate share of construction funds and resources for housing, schools and industrial plants.

"If there's going to be overcrowding, it is better that it take place in stores, offices and banks than in homes and factories."

Annual rate of depreciation allowed, to be deferred for two years now, is five per cent on a declining balance for most buildings, 10 per cent for wood-frame buildings.

Stephen said it would not be right "to holler against inflation as citizens of Canada" then cry "don't touch me" when some step was taken that will affect Victoria.

Mayor William Dennison of Toronto, whose city is affected by the deferments, asked the federation to make a study of the affects.

"If it is to be a general policy, it should apply to all cities," he said.

The capital cost allowance deferrals, expected to add four to six per cent to commercial construction costs, could cause a drop in assessment of the affected cities and make municipal tax increases necessary, Mayor Dennison said.

Calgary's Mayor Jack Leslie predicted his city could become a "depressed area" as a result.

Union to Urge Higher Exemptions on Tax

Resolutioss calling for higher income tax exemptions, new education financing and more secondary industry will be debated by Canadian Union of Public Employees at their provincial convention which opened at the Empress today.

About 140 delegates are at the annual conference which will consider 46 resolutions. It will conclude Sunday with a day-long seminar on labor relations and the new Mediation Commission Act.

CUPE has about 10,500 members in 92 B.C. locals and a national membership of 120,000, making it the largest union in the country next to the United Steelworkers of America.

National president Stanley Little of Ottawa was on hand for today's opening. Harry Greene of North Vancouver is the provincial president.

Among resolutions:

- A call for a $2,000 instead of the current $1,000 basic income tax exemption for adults and an exemption increase to $750 for each dependent child.
- A proposal that Canada withdraw from both NATO and NORAD.
- A call on the provincial government to promote secondary industry and minimize export of raw materials.

CUPE delegates will also be asked to support the B.C. Federation of Labour proposed boycott of the provincial government's new mediation commission.

More Action Threatened By Postmen

VANCOUVER (CP) — Letter carriers who staged a two-hour sitdown Monday in Vancouver and Burnaby have threatened more action unless the post office provides more help to sort and deliver mail.

Ray Andrus, local president of the letter carriers union, said following a meeting Wednesday night that the executive supports the action.

He said there will be more "strong action" if any of the members who took part in Monday's demonstration are disciplined.

The letter carriers were protesting heavy work loads they claimed have been building up since suspension of Saturday mail deliveries.

THE BELMONT STORY

Frank Stewed For Two Days, Then Decided

NEW YORK (CP)—Frank McMahon, 66-year-old oil millionaire from Vancouver and Calgary, personally made the decision to ship unbeaten Majestic Prince to Belmont Park for a possible try at winning racing's triple crown for three-year-olds.

McMahon is quoted to this effect in this week's edition of Sports Illustrated, in a story by Whitney Tower.

"Nobody made this decision but myself," McMahon is quoted as saying in telling why he over-ruled two close advisers—trainer Johnny Longden and Leslie Combs of Kentucky, breeder of the magnificent chestnut colt that won the Kentucky Derby and the Preakneses.

McMahon also discusss the possible motives of Longden and Combs in recommending, shortly after Majestic Prince won the Preakness on May 17, that the colt be rested, skipping the Belmont.

"When Johnny told me he felt the colt needed a rest, I went along with his decision. I felt that if he was all that tired, Majestic Prince should remain at Pimlico awhile and then come on to Belmont anyway to see how he progressed. What disappointed me, to say the least, was that without my knowledge, Longden ordered a plane for California . . ."

McMahon says he stewed about the decision for two days and two nights. Then he called Longden and told him the horse had to go to Belmont and run in the Stakes, if fit.

"Johnny listened to me and then replied, 'If you want the press to train the horse, that's OK with me.' I answered him quickly, 'The press is not training this horse. You are. Do you think he can win the Belmont?'

'Yes,' said Longdon, 'he can win.' 'OK, that's what I want you to do; do your best to win the Belmont.' "

Advisers Might Enjoy Some Gains

The motives of his advisers? McMahon in the magazine article suggests that Combs has other Raise a Native offspring to sell. In addition, Combs eventually will stand Majestic Prince at his Lexington, Ky., farm.

"Wouldn't he or any other breeder feel better to be standing a richer and undefeated stallion than one who had been beaten in the Belmont?

"As for Longden, he must have a lot of money buried away somewhere, but he knows that he could probably make more, on his percentage of purses, by skipping the Belmont, resting up and winning a lot of other races on the West Coast and in Chicago against inferior competition."

Leslie Combs' answer to McMahon, as quoted by Tower, was:

"Somebody must be putting pressure on Frank to run in the Belmont, and I don't know who is doing it or why. It's a tough race, and if the colt isn't at his peak it would be terrible to have him beat. That's what I'm thinking of. A horse is not like a machine. You can't run 'em when you want to. You run when the horse shows you he's ready.

"Being a good sport is OK, but what's the point in being a good sport if you think the horse may be beat? Majestic Prince didn't look as good at Pimlico as he did at Churchill Downs."

$73,380 for Six Months of Work

Longden tried to set the record straight on a statement attributed to him right after Pimlico. Newspapers quoted him as saying:

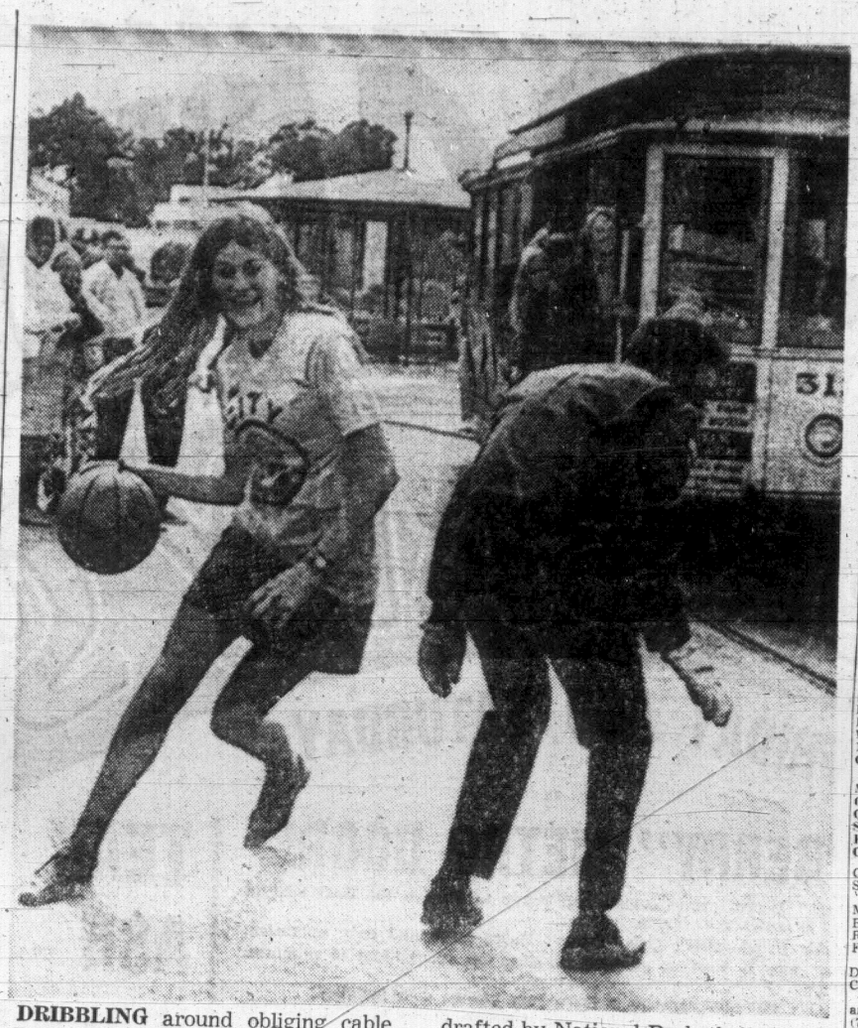

"I checked back and found that horses that run in the Belmont haven't been worth a damn after that. I mean as race horses. I don't want to make the same mistake."

It is true that Count Fleet, winner of the triple crown in wartime 1943 with Longden in the saddle, never raced again after his 25-length Belmont victory. But others have won the Belmont and gone on to other triumphs, such as Nashua, Gallant Man, Sword Dancer, Jaipur, Quadrangle and Damascus.

"I didn't mean it the way it came out," says Longden. "I know there are good horses who won the Belmont. What I meant is that there are some who were not as good ever again."

Tower quotes McMahon as saying he pays Longden $25,000 a year and 15 per cent of all purses won by the McMahon horses in his care. McMahon also says he gave both Longden and jockey Bill Hartack $5,000 each after the Santa Anita Derby, the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness.

Sports Illustrated puts Longden's earnings on Majestic Prince at $73,380 in six months of racing, counting the $15,000 in bonuses.

DRIBBLING around obliging cable car operator, 18-year-old Denise Long shows off basketball ability in San Francisco. Only girl ever to be drafted by National Basketball Association team, Denise conferred with Warrior officials Wednesday. (See story below). (AP Wirephoto)

18-YEAR-OLD . . . . . . A DRAFT CHOICE

Hoop Offer Intriguing

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — "The first thing I thought when I heard I'd been drafted," says Denise Long, "was, 'do I have to play?' I thought it was like the army."

After she learned the choice was strictly hers, and that being drafted by San Francisco Warriors of the National Basketball Association was something more than just a publicity gimmick, Denise became intrigued by the idea of playing professional basketball.

So Wednesday she arrived in San Francisco to see if, maybe, she could play and go to college at the same time.

Warriors' owner Franklin Mieuli was in Detroit at National Basketball Association meetings when Denise, her parents and sister arrived. But he is due back today and has promised to take her for a look at several colleges.

If she can find one she likes, and if she and Mieuli can agree to terms, she could be the mainstay of a girls' league that would play before the Warriors' regular games next season.

Denise, 18, averaged 69 points a game during her senior year in high school in Whitten, Iowa. She is five feet, 11 inches.

Giants Too Much For Expos' Mauch

San Francisco Extends Montreal Losing Streak

By The Associated Press

Big Giants, little Giants . . . they're all 10 feet tall to Gene Mauch and his Montreal Expos.

The bottom of the San Francisco batting order fell upon Mauch Wednesday night, leading the Giants to an 8-3 victory over Montreal that ran the Expos' losing streak to 18 games—a record for major league expansion clubs.

Jack Hiat, Hal Lanier, pitcher Mike McCormick and Don Mason stroked the big hits off rookie Mike Wegener in a five-run fourth inning explosion that sent the Expos spinning within five losses of the all-time mark—set by Mauch's 1961 Philadelphia Phillies.

New York Mets, whose 17-game expansion tailspin in 1962 was eclipsed by Montreal, equalled their record-winning string of seven games by nipping Los Angeles Dodgers 1-0 in a 15-inning struggle.

The streaking San Diego Padres blanked Philadelphia Phillies 3-0, Cincinnati Reds swept past Pittsburgh Pirates 5-3, St. Louis Cardinals edged Atlanta Braves 4-3 and Chicago Cubs topped Houston Astros 5-4 in other National League games.

Wegener took a 3-0 lead into the fourth inning at Montreal, walked Willie Mays and then got two quick outs — Willie McCovey on a pop-up and Ken Henderson on strikes.

SENT GIANTS AHEAD

But Dave Marshall drew another walk, Hiat and Lanier rapped run-scoring singles and McCormick sent the Giants ahead 4-3 with a two-run double before Mason's RBI single capped the rally.

Three ninth-inning runs wrapped up McCormick's third victory and left Mauch bleeding sarcasm in he Montreal clubhouse.

"Mike Wegener was pitching great until . . . Hiat, Lanier, McCormick and Mason came up in the fourth," said the embattled Expos' pilot.

Lanier and Mason, who went into the game batting .221 and .214 respectively, each went 3-for-5 to pace the Giants' 12-hit attack.

The Mets broke a scoreless tie in the 15th when Tommie Agee raced home from first on a single by Wayne Garrett that skipped past centre fielder Willie Davis for a two-base error.

After Met second baseman Al Weis cut down pinch runner Billy Grabarkewitz at the plate in the top of the 15th on a brilliant defensive play, Bud Harrelson drew a leadoff walk from Pete Mikkelsen in the bottom half. Agee forced Harrelson at second, then sped around the bases when Davis overran Garrett's sharp single to centre.

The victory enabled the Mets to match their seven-game winning streak of July, 1966, and sent them two games over the .500 mark.

UNFORGOTTEN ART

Minnesota Twins manager Billy Martin says stealing home is not a forgotten art, but American League pitchers are having trouble getting the picture where Rod Carew is concerned.

The Twins' second baseman swiped home for the fifth time in five attempts this season in Minnesota's 4-2 victory over New York Yankees Wednesday night and closed in on a couple of records. He also rapped out three hits and raised his major league-leading average to .399.

Elsewhere, Baltimore Orioles trounced Oakland Athletics 6-1, Detroit Tigers nipped California Angels 5-4 in 10 innings, Cleveland Indians pounded Seattle Pilots 10-4 and Washington Senators beat Kansas City Royals 3-1. In the only afternoon action, Chicago White Sox hammered Boston Red Sox 7-2.

CHAMPION'S POLITICS INCONSISTENT

WINNIPEG (CP) — Head-coach Jim Champion of British Columbia Lions has costly political opinions.

In a recent celebrity dinner, the coach of the Western Football Conference club stated that if he had a vote he would cast it provincially for the Social Credit and federally for the Liberals.

He drew a $50 fine for "activity inconsistent with club policy," Lions' general-manager Denny Veitch said here Tuesday.

"However, I understand Jim has definite plans to appeal the decision."

Thirteen Lucky For Lakers

Unlucky "13" proved to be exactly the opposite for Lake Cowichan Lakers Wednesday night at Royal Athletic Park.

Lakers collected their first win in 13 starts by slipping by Gorge Hotel 6-5 on a fine performance by Harold Halvorson.

Halvorson bashed out a bases-loaded triple in the sixth inning and then scored what turned out to be the winning run on Ken Jubenville's groundout for a 6-4 lead.

Stan Gibb brought Gorge to within one run by singling in Daryl Proulx in the bottom of the inning but their batters in the final inning all went out on "pop-up" flies.

Tom Nicholson, who took over in the fourth inning, earned the win.

Phantom Backfielder In Football

WINNIPEG (CP) — A phantom player dubbed "Benson" may be running through the backfields of Canadian Football League teams this coming season.

His name won't be on anyone's roster, he won't wear a number and he won't catch any passes or make any tackles—but he'll be a real problem for team officials.

"We call him Benson after Finance Minister Edgar Benson," CSL statistician Greg Fulton said.

"The proposed five-per-cent tax on airline fares will have the effect of adding one player—in terms of travel expenses—to each team's roster."

LOEB WELCOMED

The ghostly Benson was only one of the chores the CFL dealt with Wednesday—others included further work toward a 1970 schedule, site and date of the 1970 Grey Cup game, possible common draft of United States-trained Canadian players and welcome of newcomber David Loeb of Ottawa to the league.

Loeb is the Ottawa grocer who paid nearly $750,000 recently to purchase he Grey Cup champin Rough Riders.

The general managers of the nine CFL clubs have met for two days; the Eastern and Western conference have held separate meetings for one afternoon.

Today, the CFL executive meets in semi-annual conclave.

Among other things, the CFL is expected to hear bids from Hamilton, Toronto and Vancouver to play host to thhe 1970 Grey Cup classic.

RCMP CLAIM GAME

Colwood RCMP romped to their sixth straight exhibition softball victory on Wednesday, downing Victoria City Police 13-7 at Royal Roads.

LEADING rusher with Ottawa Roughriders for past four seasons, halfback Bo Scott (above) has been signed by Cleveland Browns of National Football League. Scott played out option with Canadian team last season.

KOREANS SUSPENDED

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — The International Soccer Federation FIFA formally excluded North Korea from the preliminary round of the world soccer cup because it refused to play Israel.

Is McLeod Finished With Nats?

WINNIPEG (CP) — Hap Emms, boss of Hockey Canada, met members of Canada's national team until nearly midnight Wednesday night, then called a news conference for today.

It was expected the team's new managing director would name a coach to succeed Jackie McLeod, who has led the squad nearly four years.

Emms discussed the future with national team members in Toronto and then met others in private talks here.

The owner of Niagara Falls Flyers of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series has said it will be mid-summer before the exact make-up of Canada's international squad will be known.

Not until the International Ice Hockey Federation has met in summer congress in Switzerland will it be known whether Canadian requests for an open world hockey championship will be met.

Canada's second choice is for "12 to 14 professionals" on the national team or, failing that, a minimum of six reconstituted pros, a proposition already favored by IIHF authorities.

RETAIN NUCLEUS HERE

Emms has speculated that a firm nucleus of a national team will be retained in Winnipeg, with the team to carry Canada's colors into international competition being made up about three weeks before the world tournament.

Such a team would comprise "a smattering" of amateurs, juniors and professionals.

McLeod, 38, is a native of Swift Current, Sask., who overcame a polio handicap as a youth and went on to play 10 years as a pro, mostly in the minor leagues.

He was the top scorer in the 1961 world hockey championships with 10 goals when Trail Smoke Eaters won the tournament for the last time for Canada.

McLeod was a member of the unsuccessful 1962 Galt Terriers team and the Smoke Eaters squad of 1963.

He coached the senior Saskatoon Quakers and the junior Moose Jaw Canucks before taking over the national team in August, 1965.

The tough, wiry young coach operates a store in Swift Current and carries a commercial pilot's licence which he used during the recent airlines strike.

Esquimalt Club Checked by Polz

Bill Polz fanned 14 batters and allowed only two hits while powering Strathcona Hotel to a 3-1 victory over Esquimalt in a Vancouver Island Junior Men's Softball League game Wednesday at Bullen Park.

After both teams scored once in the first inning, Strathcona grabbed the win in the sixth on two hits and a pair of Esquimalt errors.

Only Bates Find Building Success

Bate Construction is not well known among rivals in the Major Men's Softball League as a builder — but rather as a destroyer.

They continued to sow destruction Wednesday, capturing their 11th victory in 12 starts by crushing cellar-dwelling Langford Drywall 10-2 at Central Park.

Gary Aiken eased the path to victory with a two-run homer to spark a six-run rally. He also brought in another run in the third with a double.

Jim Moody chipped in a double and two singles to add to the 14-hit Bate offensive.

Barry Jackson allowed only three hits to gain credit for victory.

Unearned runs in each of the last two innings Wednesday vaulted Century Inn to within half a game of leading Lake Cowichan in Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League action at Heywood Avenue Park.

Century closed the gap by downing CFB Combos 2-1.

Mike Cox came across the plate in the sixth inning on an overthrow and Bill Mundie singled in Gord Rutherfrod to seal the win in the final frame.

Jim Buchan had presented Combos with the lead in the fifth inning by scoring on a passed ball.

Combos' pitcher Bob Harris held Century hitless for the first five innings and recorded seven strikeouts while going the distance.

Winning pitcher Cox allowed four hits and retired three batters.

SAVARD OUT . . . . . . AS SERVANT

Political Body-Check?

QUEBEC (CP) — A debate in the national assembly concerning the appointment of Montreal Canadiens' Serge Savard to a civil service post ended with the hockey-player refusing the job Wednesday.

The 23-year-old National Hockey League defenceman said in an interview late Wednesday he had turned down a "part-time" position as deputy secretary in the public works department because debate over him had reached "such proportions."

In reply to a question by Liberal Pierre Laporte, Public Works Minister Armand Russell said Savard had been approached and offered the civil service job, that he had accepted and that his nomination now was subject to cabinet approval.

But earlier in the debate, Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand had denied such an offer had been made and Mr. Laporte expressed surprise that the premier should not know of the offer after spending last weekend on the hustings with the hockey player.

Savard added he knew nothing about public works but Mr. Russell said the star defenceman most valuable player in the playoffs had the necessary qualifications to fill the position.

Stable Fire Destroys 43 Harness Horses

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — Fire raged through a public barn at Saratoga Raceway early today and killed 43 harness racing horses, the raceway reported. One of the dead was the well-known filly Jostle, winner of more than $40,000 last year.

Firemen said they had no chance to rescue any horses from the wood structure. A second barn housing standardbreds, caught fire but was saved.

No horses in the second barn were injured, firemen said.

There was no indication yet what caused the fire and no dollar estimate as to loss.

The fire is the second major disaster to strike the raceway this decade and the third since 1949.

Twenty-one horses were killed by fire that swept though a 30-stall barn on Oct. 7, 1961. The loss then, including barn and equipment, was valued at $150,000.

On Jan. 13, 1949, another 23 horses died when fire destroyed a winter stable. Again the loss of horses, barn and equipment was put at $150,000.
